Dear Richard,

Today, Ann promise me to help me sending the photos.

The final treatment on the columns is, as the decorations on the columns were waxed for decades. Now, this leaves the marks on the surrounding areas, so when you look at them, looks like more work was done to the columns. This is quite radical treatment, as I did many times in Connecticut. Well, many customers asked me to distress the surfaces on the top of this, but I did not do anything like this in the Library.

Here are the photos, and please give me some feed back, thank you.

Brandon
