Hi Jeffrey,

I hope you are well. I have 2 things to tell you about:

1) The research you supported with a $50,000 grant has borne fruit. We have submitted a paper for publication summarizing our results. If you would like a outline of the results of the research, we can email one to you, or present to you in person.

2) I have been made surgical director of the brand new transgender surgery program at Mount Sinai. That's right — Mount Sinai, being the progressive place that it is, saw an opportunity and need to take a leadership position in the area of Transgender Health and created the first full-spectrum academic program in the US focused on transgender surgery and care.

This was such an interesting and innovative idea, that I thought it would make a good documentary. I pitched the idea to a well-known director and we have started scouting interviews and are in the process of making a fundraising trailer.

If I could just be really forward, I was wondering if you would be interested in supporting this documentary? If so, the producer, director and I would love to come and give you the pitch in person.

This is an exciting, groundbreaking project — both the center and the documentary — that will do good for the world. I hope you can be a part of it.

Best regards,

Jess Ting
