

Subject: ICYMI: Election Edition
From: Reid Hoffman <[REDACTED]>
To: Jeffrey Epstein <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, September 22, 2016 10:43:51 PM

Dear friends,

These are the times that try our attention spans.

Our presidential election is now only 46 days away. I thought I'd get ahead of all the election-related emails and outreach inevitably headed your way, and share a few updates.

Last week I chose to support a young Marine Corps veteran's effort on Crowdpack.com to urge Donald Trump to release his tax returns. Also, my team and I publicly released Trumped Up Cards. A satirical card game, it gives people an opportunity to laugh and learn together while contemplating the absurdities of this year's presidential election. I've also endorsed Hillary Clinton as my choice for President, and recently shared my thoughts on this in conversation with Erin Burnett on CNN.

I've felt the need to act and offer support in numerous ways, both traditional and creative. As I shared in an interview with Andrew Ross Sorkin at the New York Times, there's a lot to be afraid of. But if you aspire to be a courageous leader, that fear is a signal that you should step forward.

I hope you'll join me in whatever way feels appropriate to you.

RH

If you'd like to join me, here are a few simple ways you can engage over the next week:

1. Support Marine Corps Veteran's campaign calling for Donald Trump to release his taxes. I'll match your pledge 5:1.
2. Buy / Share copies of Trumped Up Cards with your friends or family, and spread the word. (Note: All profits will go to charity – and it's a little "PG-13", so only play with people who are old enough to vote!)
3. Be vocal on social media. Share your views, spread the word about the efforts I've described above if they resonate with you, and get engaged.

Recent Media

- This Tech Billionaire is Trying to Lure Trump to Release his Taxes and Having Fun With It washingtonpost.com
- Reid Hoffman Plays His Trump Card backchannel.com
- A Silicon Valley Billionaire Just Challenged Donald Trump in the Best Way Possible. LinkedIn cofounder Reid Hoffman will donate up to $5 million to veterans groups if Trump releases his tax returns. motherjones.com
- Silicon Valley is playing Cards Against Trump usatoday.com
- LinkedIn Co-Founder Says He'll Pay to See Trump's Tax Returns buzzfeed.com

• unsubscribe • update profile

© 2016 Reid Hoffman. All rights reserved.

You are receiving this email because we are connected on LinkedIn.