Hi Jeffrey,

It's such a shame that you prefer to let me go. I think I'd be great for your foundation at this juncture. And here's why:

I can travel everywhere you need.

I can astutely identify relevant research for you.

I can promote your scientists in the [REDACTED] and have good connections.

I write and assess quickly and well.

I have good relations with your team and scientists. They like my writing and support. (except for the blip with [REDACTED]--which I would hope to remedy).

I am loyal, discrete and totally trustworthy. Which I would always be whether I work for you or not.

If you contact [REDACTED] they will tell you how pleased they were with the report that I did for them. Ben Goertzel also really liked my [REDACTED] which will go to press soon.

I really hope to do at least a trial run in a new role with the foundation.

Please do let me know about seeing you in July. If not, I have to get out there and hustle.

Thank you.
