Why is our govt pushing expensive cellular with a limited life that will take three years?

Sort of makes the satellite thing a bit more urgent. Once that back haul capacity gets met the regulators and telecoms will have every reason to block satellite.

See below. U.S. govt stuff

. The WH is seeking two things during this panel: political commitments from attending countries to help the affected countries build GHSA capacity in three years, and commitments for actual resources ($) to build back capacities over the long term.
