turns out our plane is already set for us (we ordered it and it has to give us a ride back anyways). Which, in view of the potential weather issues turns out to be ok.

You are certainly welcome to come for lunch (I am in no way discouraging it, and I very much appreciate the ride offer!), but in light of dinner, maybe go with Plan B and meet at Richards?

Weather for tomorrow's heli flight to St Bart will be similar to today's weather, low visibility due to low pressure North of St Thomas, If the Low pressure continues to move North weather should improve,. Note the satellite image below, there is a line of weather between St Thomas and Puerto Rico, which builds up in the afternoon, since it's pushing down from the North due to the spiral movement of Low pressure.
