Thank you, Jeff. I enclose the email that never went through. I am in New York right now and I will stay through Sunday. If there is any chance I could see you for a few minutes, that would be great. Please let me know.

Dear Jeff:

You may remember that I told you about some exciting new ideas for investigating the cellular basis of feelings. We are at the point where we need to proceed experimentally, but I do not want to do so through regular grant approaches because we will obviously lose control of the ideas. Can we discuss the possibility of you funding this effort? I will be in New York Thursday and Friday and, in case you are there, I could come over and give you details on the project.

All best,

Antonio
