In an email exchange yesterday Jib said he's almost there with a conclusion. Have a call with him early afternoon today, will have a better idea then. He was not in favor of the grat. After call last week, I ran some of his musings by Alan but they won't work. It was early then-he was still getting his bearings. Called Carolyn yesterday afternoon but didn't connect yet. She has moved to the grat camp. 'tweaks' relate mainly to whether or not to 'fix' the right. I reviewed all my notes on discussions on the subject – there are pros and cons- as usual, not straightforward in terms of which is best. Alan is researching valuation methodology. Promise to come back to you this afternoon.

Leon tells me there is a few tweaks to the old plan, and suggests that Jib put his ideas in a memo to hasten critique
