I am not a money person but I get it totally. It is very logical.

Breaking it into smaller pieces you lose the leverage that you have with a large sum. Stupid.

Money in general , due to compound returns grows exponentially. Therefore by breaking it into little pieces. You reduce it's capacity. Ex $4^2 = 16$. Break it into $2^2 + 2^2 = 8$ Larsen should be investing in huge chunks not tiny dentist like pieces,
