Oh Jeffrey, u r so funny a=d predictable. Well you are a man (or more like a little excited boy) so i=understand. I just wanted to believe that maybe it would work without "play=ng". I knew i was wrong but i still had a little hope. For me sex is the mo=t intimate thing. But i guess i dont havea choice here. Haha I know how much u helped me. I know i would be most likely back in [REDACTED] right now without u, working in McDonalds...
So we r both in NY t=is week. Its been a long time, i guess i can try and see how its gonna feel=again. I dont promise anything but thats the best i can do... To try. Haha u=always get ur way.
Anyway what about that art fair tmrw? Is=that offer still on a table?

no play, is ok, but..... it makes little sense. I ha=e been there for you and have always tried to do as much for you as i can, .=nbsp; you feel comfortable asking for advice, which is much more intimate t=an play the price you can pay, if you want it would be 30 k for 1000 shares so this guy is ripping your father off. no need to buy it now, treat it like a guess, he is interesting he will be around for a very long, time,,no rush to get in , you can always participate later. . thanks for the photo. I miss our fun

Good morning. I have a question for you. :)/div>

What do you think about FB going IPO?

Because some brokerage company offers my dad a deal that he can buy some shares now before it goes on market on May 18th but I don't like their price it seems really high. The minimum to invest is $50k for 1000 shares. So $50/1 share. And of course my dad doesn't have 50k, and was asking me to join with about $20k or so.

So my concern is that if it's a good investment in general to buy FB. And if so then what's the best way to buy and if to keep it long term or just trade it asap afterwards. It seems like a great idea but for some reason I'm not so sure about it. I'm really interested about what you think. Thank you
