The dog you saw in the street is Shutzhund trained.

Just want to confirm you are now interested in one at this level.

There would obviously be a period of transition for the dog when they bring them into your home and it learns that you are its master. This would involve you and the dog (as I presume you will be its master, not Brice?)

Below is a link to info from the group that supplied the one in the street (international Canine Imports) so that you can read more about the training if you want. Global Canine (our original suppliers) have told me they do also source these dogs.

Darren is helping me deal with Global Canine. Just want to be clear on what you want.
