This week we're all about runways - the kind skinny models teeter on and the kind that planes race down. In honor of New York City's Fashion Week, starting September 8, we're showcasing hotels with interiors by superlative fashion designers, including Maison Moschino in Milan and Hotel Missoni in Edinburgh. Prefer hiking boots to high heels? We've got three Inkaterra properties in Peru, a secret destination in Bali, and an early ski sale in Aspen. So if you're looking for an adventure - fashionable or otherwise - we've got you covered. (Photo: Vivamarinha Hotel - Portugal - on sale Weds., Sept. 7)

London's Restored Belle-Epoque Beauty

Corinthia Hotel London

Corinthia Hotel London is one of the latest luxury hotels to (re-)open in the soon-to-be Olympic capital. Fresh from a major restoration and refurbishment, the Belle Epoque property houses 294 rooms, some on two levels in rooftop turrets, and a David Collins-designed bar and restaurant. But the showstopper is Espa Life, a four-story "next-generation" spa with an amphitheater sauna.

Serious hotel lovers across Asia think of this intimate refuge, in the shadow of holy Mount Agung, as a kind of secret handshake. Once you go, you're in the know, and most guests return to the black sand beachfront on Bali's less developed eastern shore every year. Designed by Kerry Hill of Aman Resorts fame, two thatch-roofed Balinese wantilans (meeting hall-style buildings) house 55 sleek but homey guestrooms, all with bijou balconies or patios overlooking coconut groves and the Indian Ocean.

Understated and elegant, with gorgeous beach views, Bacara Resort & Spa can be described in the same terms as Santa Barbara itself. The vibe across the property's 78 oceanside acres is sunny and sophisticated but entirely relaxed, encouraging guests to spend a day on the sand or in the spa. Large guestrooms come equipped with Frette linens and robes and are made for indulging indoors... but ocean views from the patio or balcony beckon.

A stay at Vivamarinha puts you close to Lisbon's cultural highlights (about 40 minutes away) as well as the beaches of the Portuguese Riviera in and around the pretty coastal town of Cascais. Rooms and suites are contemporary, spacious and of the settle-in-and-stay-a-while variety, with kitchen amenities, living areas and private outdoor spaces. Add to relaxation with a treatment in the world-class wellness area and on a walk through the manicured gardens.

One of the first hotels to define the Philippe Starck aesthetic, the Mondrian has gone from hectic L.A. hotspot to laid-back Sunset Boulevard classic. The bright minimalist feel of the original Starck design is intact, but since the hotel's 2008 make-over, it feels a lot warmer and a little more relaxed, but just as chic. The views of L.A. are still unrivaled, and the scene at Skybar is hot; while you still might see someone famous at breakfast, it's more likely to be a confident leading lady than a striving supporting actress.

Inside a revamped Neo-Classical railroad station, the Maison Moschino is at once intimate and alluring. With white furnishings, lanterns fashioned to look like clouds and bedspreads covered in rose petals, the Maison Moschino aesthetic is pure surrealist fairytale. Given the hotel's fashionable pedigree (interiors were designed by Moschino's creative director, Rossella Jardini), it's no surprise that the 65-room hotel is a hit with visiting fashion cognoscenti.

Atop a hill on the border of Italy's Romagna and Marche regions sits Castello di Montegridolfo, a lovingly restored medieval castle, converted to a romantic hotel. With an impressive artistic pedigree - it is part-owned by fashion designer Alberta Ferretti - the 54 suites scattered within its 14th century wheat-gold walls range from lush medievalism to dark-wood minimalism. But what sets the hotel apart are the striking views - order a sundown Negroni and watch the sky blush pink over the Adriatic.

For more than 35 years, Inkaterra has introduced travelers to Peru with the goal of protecting the environment and promoting the country's native cultures. Tens of thousands of visitors come to Inkaterra to discover the country, see the rainforest and, of course, make the pilgrimage to Machu Picchu. Get to know the brand's three unique properties: the Reserva Amazonica, which offers jungle treks through the rainforest; the grand La Casona in Cusco; and the Machu Picchu Pueblo Hotel, from which travelers can launch visits to the ancient city.
