Dear [REDACTED],

We've been looking over the office's work schedule and, unfortunately, due to Robert's upcoming absence everyone's workload (especially Bram's!) is going to be so heavy that it will be impossible for anyone to leave the office this week. Please convey Robert's personal apologies to Mr. Epstein about this; he feels terrible about an interruption to any project. Moreover, Robert has never been out of the office for longer than a week (excluding business trips) and we're doing our absolute best to make sure our clients are as happy as possible during his absence.

This entire month is going to be a difficult one with regards to scheduling, so may I suggest that we have at least one week's notice before planning visits? This way, we can do our very best to arrange our architects' schedules throughout the office to best suit Mr. Epstein. o:p>

Would you also please ask Mr. Epstein about the bills I've emailed him? I've sent him an invoice three weeks ago, and also a few others last week, but have yet to receive a response. I'd greatly appreciate hearing back soon from either of you on this. Would we prefer that I send invoices to someone else, perhaps Rich Kahn at BRK Associates would be appropriate?

Please let me know.

Sincerely,

Sally Ann
