<=div> I didn't get it onto a plane, but I found it under the seat in front of me.

It was a razor blade. Unpacked and just laying on the carpet. An old-style razor blade like this one:

I rang a flight attendant and whispered into his ear. He asked me to get out of the seat, then he got on all fours and picked it up (using his own fingers). Then he said "thanks for not causing a panic."

Explaining the vision was not difficult. Everyone can relate to the power of connected neighborhoods where we knew our neighbors, where crime is low, and where we work together with the folks around us to create a better community for all.

The hard thing was articulating how we would build a social platform that could bring all of that real-world benefit to all neighborhoods around the world. Sp...

From a scientist's perspective, humans die because their only purpose in life is to pass on their genes. But this is a question that can be interpreted in many ways. From an engineer's perspective, humans die because their bodies are complex systems on which the accumulation of damage and malfunctions here and there cause what we call "aging", which in turn causes death. Now, if you are asking ... Read More »

If there were no police, most violent crime rates would actually go down. Only the rate of one type of crime would go up.

No, I'm not being tricky and saying "crime rates" would go down because of no police to record the statistics. I literally mean that fewer violent crimes would happen, with the exception of one particular type of violent crime.

The reason the rates of all other violent crimes ...

During early morning hours, most people are in bed, and not anticipating a visit from the police. To oppose the officers or agents sent to arrest them, they have to overcome the cobwebs that sleep brings, and that gives the cops a reaction time advantage. The objective in serving an arrest warrant is to get the named person in custody with as little fuss as possible. If the person is someone wh... Read More=#160;»

Actually Pokemon Go's serve= availability is a big fat mess. 3 years ago I read an article on tech sta=tup's biggest problem being them thinking "too small" so=IF they succeed, their poorly-planned limited resources make them lose a l=t of potential profit. It's funny that Niantic, a company that ha= 12...
