The documentation (emails b=tween myself, [REDACTED] and our third roommate) is in Swedish, but clearly s=ates that she accepted a loan of $1,500. She knows this, but apparently thi=ks that she can get away with not repaying her loan if she just denies havi=g ever taken it. Regrettably, we never signed any papers.

I will take up the issue with her mother as well. How would yo= like to proceed? Is there anything we can say to her to urge her to repay =he loan?

Richard -

I'm so sorry for this inconvenience. The obligation, however, is completely in [REDACTED] ballpark. She is trying to get out of repaying her loan to Jeffrey, which is inexcusable.

There is email documentation proving that she accepted a loan of $1,500 from Jeffrey, as well as two witnesses.

$600 of this loan was left by [REDACTED] as a security deposit on our mutual lease, which was why I was able to repay $4,100 (i.e. $3,500, my part of the loan, as well as these $600). However, the remaining $900 is money that [REDACTED] still has, and owes Jeffrey.

Thank you,
[REDACTED]
