You told me you had something to do on 14st. You could have come . You only asked me what time you should come back .

I sent you four emails last night , you didn't respond. I'm at police headquarters . I will be free/available around 1.

No, thank you. I can not come to the movie. I can order your tickets just tell me how many you want. You should enjoy your freedom. I don't seem to be part of your plans at all. When I asked you the other day what you thought was fun and how you planned to spend time, all you talked about was other girls and science, neither of which has anything to do with me. Yesterday you went shopping, walked around, used the subway for the first time and didn't even think to invite me all day, then you had a fit when it came time to keep your word, created a fight, canceled the fun evening I scheduled, and now in the morning you ignore everything including a broken deal and suggest a movie, no explanation, no apology for last night ?! It's July 22nd and I am ready to move on. I can't live like this.
