glad to hear your 'voice' again, hernia recovery a bit LESS bumpy this week-- I am in the midst of a Project Zero Summer Institute on the Future of Learning, with three foci-- Globalization, the Digital Revolution, and the Biological Revolution (neuroscience, genetics, psychopharmacology), so far, so good today we talked about globalization and the enormous role of speed--how within days the whole world felt the shock of the Lehman brothers meltdown in mid September--how a single question at Obama's news conference (about SKip Gates and James Crowley) pushed health care off the national radat screen === and now, from your world, how Goldman Sachs cashes in on trades carried out milliseconds before those done by the less technoexpert-- raises interesting Martin Nowakl questions about the speed of biological, cultural, and cognitive evolutions
