To: Jeffrey Epstein[jeevacation@gmail.com]
From: abdul hadi
Sent: Sat 1/7/2012 1:10:38 PM
Subject: Fwd: Crude's new trend

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

[redacted]

Subject: Crude's new trend

Dear Sir,

We wish you a very happy new year, as you know we continuously provide you market update this time the update is related to oil market.

Oil has headed for third yearly gain even in 2011

Dec 2009 79.81/ barrel

Dec 2010 90.83/ barrel

Dec 2011 99.02/ barrel

CITI Group has raised its Crude oil target price for 2012

The CITI Group now expects Brent Crude Oil to trade in a range of $100-$120 and to average $110 for 2012

The analysts also believe that the following factors can push up the oil prices in 2012

- A tighter oil supply in 2012
- Tensions between Israel and Iran
- The EU embargo on Iranian oil
- sanctions on Syria
- Elections in Venezuela and Angola,
- Ongoing violence in Nigeria and Yemen

The Trading Strategy

You can adopt following two strategies and achieve some good returns on your investment.

Long & Medium Term Investors

Crude oil current market Price is around $100, lowest considering 2012 forecast. Taking an entry of only 1000 barrels at price of $100 a barrel with a target of $110 would be an estimate profit of $10,000*

Short Term Investors.

Short term investors can also buy Crude Oil around $100 a barrel with significant resistance at $104 & $105. An entry of just 1000 barrels can simply be a return of 4k to 5k*. Intraday investors can also benefit selling within the resistance of $104/105.

To know more about the available opportunities in other products, or to have an investment plan based on your investment size and desired returns kindly feel free to contact at below given contact detail.

Regards
Zeeshan
[redacted]
Email: [redacted]

Century Financial Brokers LLC.
Established 1989

Licensed by the Central Bank of UAE

Regulated by ECSA (Emirates Commodities & Securities Authority)

International Stocks| Commodities| Metals| Currencies