Thank you for sending me your response. I do worry a little about an email message to her since she has a number of "advisors" that include psychics, friends and "business" associates. Since these issues rock her to the core of her potential, I am positive that she is seeking advice on how to deal with them/you from these (?) well-intentioned individuals. I would not be surprised if either misquoted bits from the email or even headlines like "threatening email from us financier..."

You are right to be angry.

She is confused, scared, and I would assume probably with few options left.

You've sent what we in medicine tend to call a "warning shot" and I suspect the message came through loud and clear. I know I will hear from her and will try my best to redirect and make concrete.
