I would like you to think about the proposition that as most biological systems are default on.. Dreaming , or the more random noise of thinking , is in fact ALWAYS on.. Sleep , turns off the physical as well as the inhibitory (the mechanism that allows dreams to remain hidden in the background). schizophrenia would be a disease in this inhibitory system,, in essence having realistic " dreams while fully mentally and physically awake.. The dreaming all day in the background could account for bad moods. . (bad "dreams" , while in the waking state). and many other mental states.

Yes. I'll be there the night of Sunday 1 May, and might have some time on Monday 2 May (they are setting up my schedule -- I'm being trotted around to meet Foundation Presidents)... I'll be going to NYC fairly regularly, it appears...

You there.. when?

I hope you are doing OK.
