In Conversation with Sarah Lewis & Jennifer Rubell
Thursday, June 5th, 6:30 – 8 PM
The Gallery

A scholar, curator and writer, Sarah Lewis has served on President Obama's Arts Policy Committee, been featured on Oprah's "Power List," has worked closely with artists at MoMA and the Tate Modern, and is a faculty member at Yale University's MFA program. In the fall of 2014, she will be at Harvard University as a Du Bois Fellow.

Join Lewis as she discusses her new book "The Rise: Creativity, the Gift of Failure, and the Search for Mastery" with Jennifer Rubell, a visual artist best-known for her monumental food performances and interactive sculptural work. She has created site-specific works at the Brooklyn Museum, Saatchi Gallery, Dallas Contemporary, Los Angeles County Museum, Beyeler Foundation and as part of Performa, the New York based performance art festival.

According to Agnus Gund, President Emerita, MoMA, "The Rise should be read not just by every artist, but by every person hoping to unearth his or her own capacity for discovery and creativity."
