Build Your Own Sunny Mid-Century Haven

Nestled between palm trees and bathed in hazy sunshine, a collection of iconic Southern California homes keep the mid-century aesthetic very much alive. Dubbed "Alexander Homes," after the construction company that brought them to life in the 1950s, these mid-century relics feature open floor plans, expansive windows, and flat or slanted roofs that hold up exposed ceiling beams.

We're still inspired by these stylized homes today, and have curated a collection around their signature look to help carry on their retro-cool tradition. Shop vintage teak furniture, prints and pillows with retro pops of colors like orange and chartreuse, and bronze accents reminiscent of the bright desert sun, and bring a little of this iconic look into your own space.

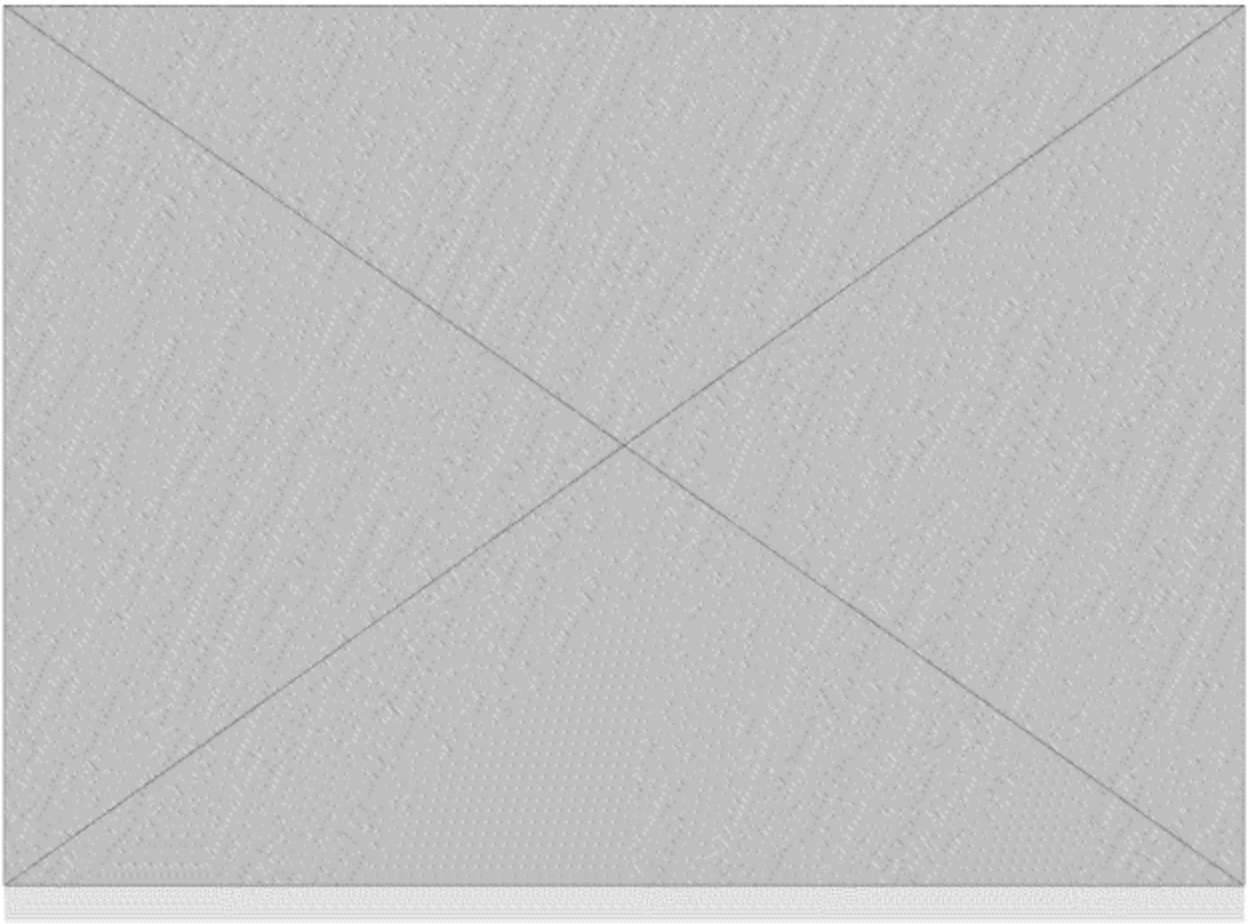

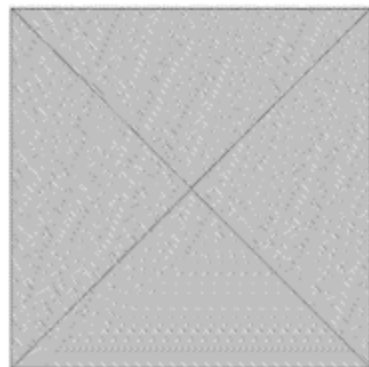

Whether you place it in the foyer to provide a spot for putting on shoes or add it to a bedroom for seating, you will find 101 reasons to use this bench. The slat-style bench is made from solid wood with a cherry bark finish - a minimalist style that will blend in well with both traditional and modern décor. Try it as a coffee table too!

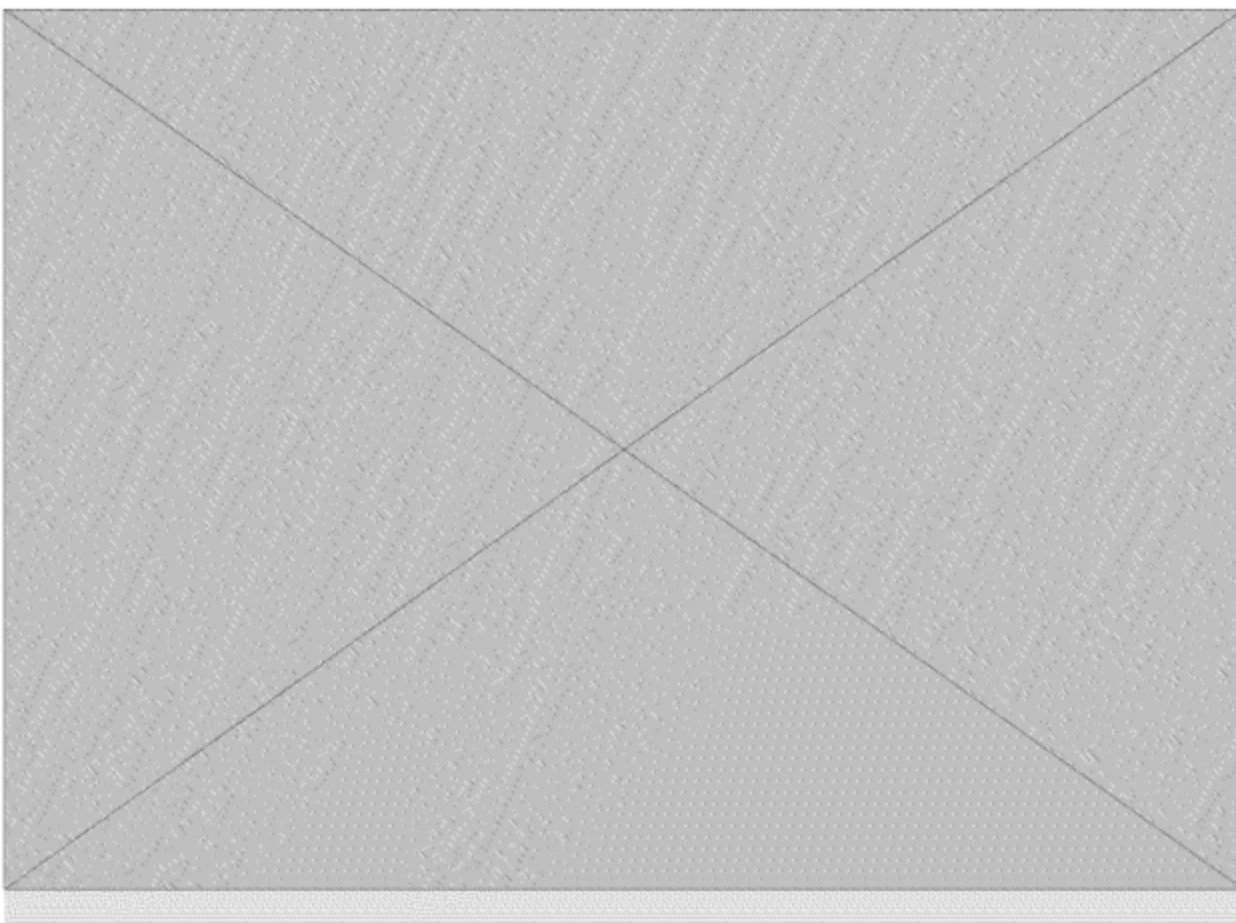

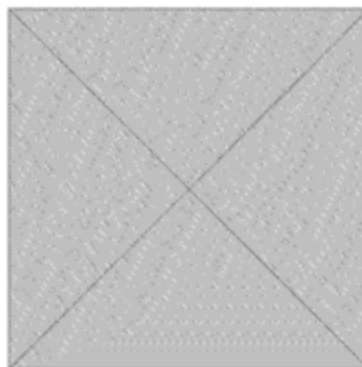

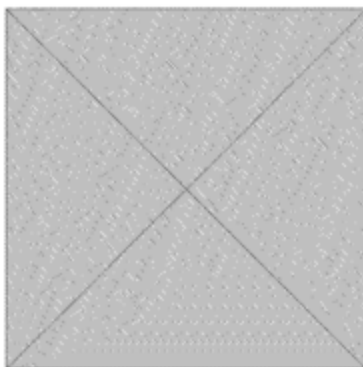

Add a jolt of color to your home. Whether it's the living room, den or bedroom this sofa makes a statement. Sunny yellow upholstery brightens up any room while cherry bark legs add a sophisticated finish and sturdy base. Lemon drop tufts are an added eye candy treat. A perfect place to lounge along the long soft cushions alone or snuggle up with that special someone.

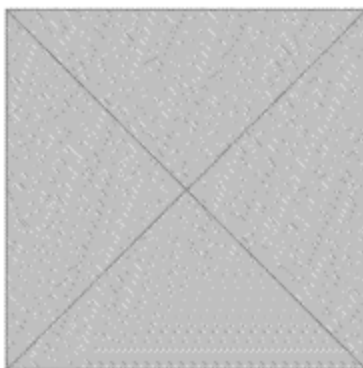

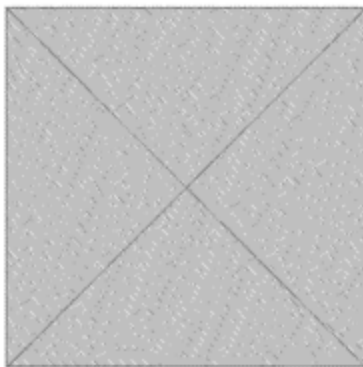

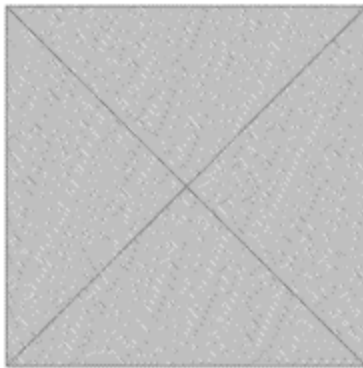

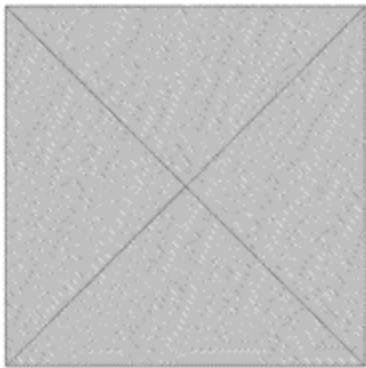

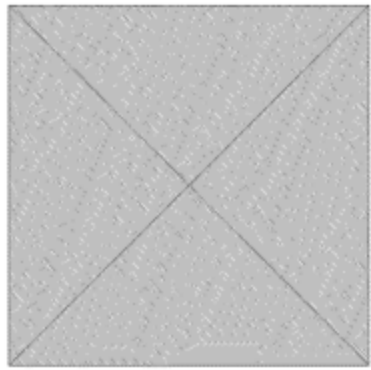

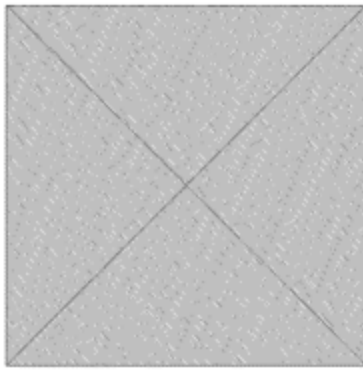

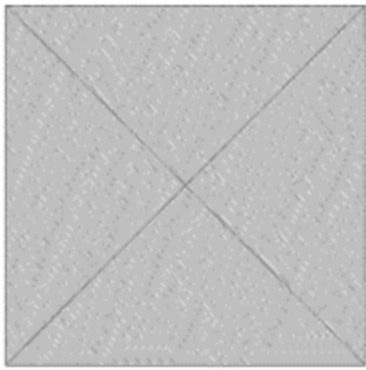

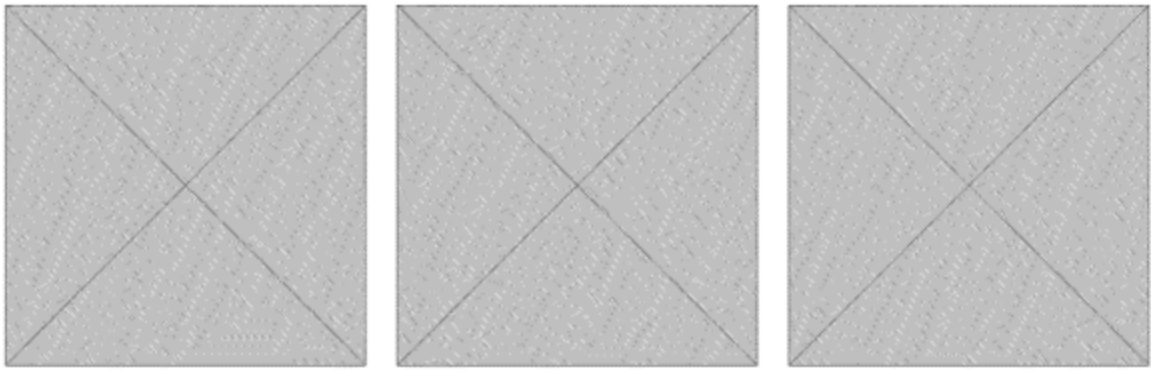

After you've popped open the bubbly and turned up the Sinatra, keep your champagne bottle chilled with this vintage ice bucket. It features leaf engravings, a chrome body, and a wood handle. A perfect accent to any classic bar.
