It is a good analogy.

It is clearer to me now than before and it could be a great thing.

This week is a bit crazy with Strategy reviews and Microsoft stuff but after it I will get to see if anyone at the Foundation sees any issues with sitting down with some people and asking if they would be interested.

I have a trip to DC in March where I can probably go up to New York City at the end so assuming everything looks good and it works for you to get a small group together there to discuss it that could be the next step.

One of the techie wealth holders suggested my version of the DAF , was in his mind like cloud computing for the giving world. all the admin and storage , is done in the giving cloud. and all you need is one piece of paper confirming your transfer to receive your tax benefits. no filings, employees. etc.
