Dear Jeffrey,

I hope this finds you well. I would like to see you when you are back in New York. But there seems little doubt that I seem to have fallen out of favor, so to speak (supplicants are used to this) which is understandable. But you should know that I have really enjoyed our friendship and I still harbor hopes that I can persuade you to be helpful. Despite what you say, I am resilient in the face of withering criticism, which you are good at. I have appended a summary (written for a dinner I will be having with the new incoming head of the Gates Foundation) about what I do here and why it is important. You might be amused, albeit dismissive.

As to the music. When we first met you asked what I really wished would happen that I could do. I am determined to make it happen and have benefitted from your critique. In any event, I do hope you choose to remain in contact and assist in the work I do. Again, I have truly enjoyed our contact. And please give my best to your companions and staff. They have been nothing but gracious. And kindly forgive my persistence; it is the only way to raise money.

With affection,
Leon
