I agree, you are absolutely right when speaking about modelling - this is not the job of my dreams - far from it! And I'd be a hundred times happier to work in a firm of Architecture - this is what I really like. But I realize that for a girl, who has just Bachelor degree and zero experience in architecture to find a job at least of an architect assistant in NY is unrealistic. One needs connections, big connections. Would you really help me find a job in architecture if I gave up modelling in NY? If so, I would be more than happy stop modelling from now and concentrate on producing my portfolio which I have already started, focus my attention on architecture.
