It was fully immersive. Purely creative. Completely collaborative. Challenging. I learned so much. We had a shoe-string budget, so everyone (except the bureaucratic duds, alas) wore as many hats as we could and worked three times as hard. I worked my ass off. I worked 16 hour days, slept 3 hours every night but was energized beyond recognition. So joyful. I flirt with fantasies of being a working stiff once a year, but my world is creative. I won't get rich, I realize, but I think it's the only thing I should and can do. Going to look at some apartments in Brooklyn today.

By the way: I was only able to do this because you gave me the gift of a home in NY. So thank you, thank you, thank you.

Where are you? When are you coming back? I found something amazing for you but it's being flown in from London. Hopefully it arrives before you do!

Not the most fascinating article, if you have a glancing understanding of the topic, but hilarious for someone to finally say it.

We just wrapped the film. It was absolutely spectacular. The best experience of my life.
