Yes that's true but your idea of 'contribution' was about massages, cooking, dancing, organizing closets, arranging flowers, serving food and other activities fit for intellectually challenged people who are not capable of accomplishing anything meaningful. The activities you encouraged were only good for you, and asked for in return for you having clothes travel school hair doctors teeth, nose. pplace to live . travel, help. spa treatments drivers, taxi, cellphones computers. shoes teachers. . diploma, but what you did was sleep all day, and argues aboout having to do something to get something,
