A Compact Shed Makes Room for Storage, Creativity and Style »

There's just one problem with this shed: It's too cool. "I've found that I just sit inside the space, look around and think how cool it is more than actually creating something," says homeowner Chris Sewell. The sunny... more »

My Houzz: Urban Goes Exotic in a Montreal Artist's Home »

Two years ago artist and designer Joel Dumas returned to his hometown of Montreal in search of a home base he could share with his daughter and son. His main criteria: being close to some green space. Having lived in Bali... more »

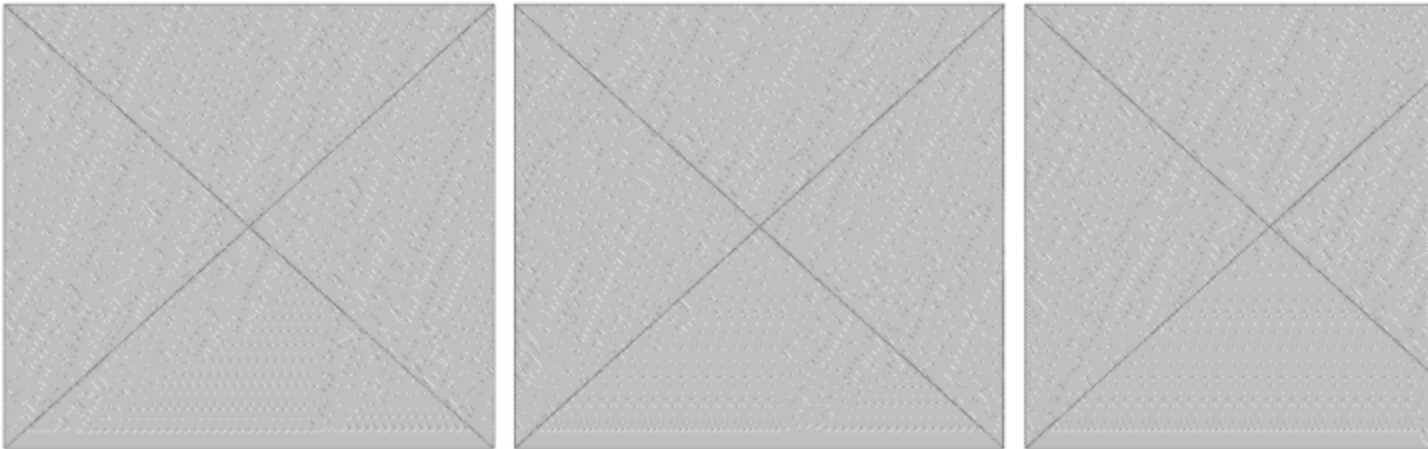

Witness a Fantastic Chihuly Glass Sculpture Installation »

The artist and sculptor Dale Chihuly is renowned for creating exuberant works of glass art from the very small to the very large. His work is in museums, botanical gardens, corporate buildings, luxury hotels and even homes around... more »

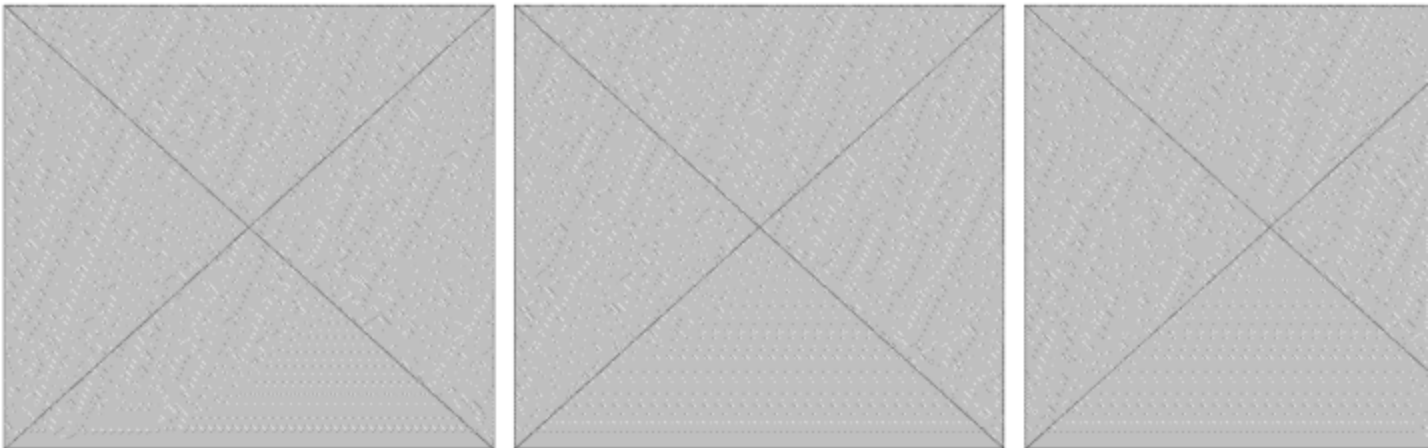

Pro Chefs Dish on Kitchens: How Marc Vetri Cooks at Home »

Marc Vetri, restaurant owner and Iron Chef winner, recently remodeled the kitchen in his Philadelphia row house with the help of designer Michael Gruber, who also designed Vetri's restaurants. A special thanks to chef Michael... more »

15 Outdoor Pet Projects You'll Lap Up »

Houzzers, we put out the call, and once again you answered. Your unconditional love for your pets shines through your care and thought you've put into building things that make them happy. And your projects have also... more »

The Perfect Kid-Friendly, Storage-Happy, Style-Loving Seating Solution »

The banquette, made popular in the diner era, has made its way into the home kitchen for good reasons: It's space-saving, it's customizable, and for a family kitchen, it just might be the perfect solution to any issue... more »

My Houzz: Quality Shows in a Contemporary Dutch Home »

Karianne Peeters and Erikjan De Wit had just months to get their unfinished house in the Netherlands into shape before the arrival of their first child, but they didn't let the time crunch get in the way of quality and comfort.... more »

Make Your Own Rustic-Chic Headboard From Salvaged Doors »

I hate watching home remodels that result in destroyed architectural components that could have been either reused or donated. Old doors are a good example. Here's how to turn a pair of weather-beaten cast-offs into a handsome... more »

Houzz Tour: A Wine Country Home, Reinvented Once Again »

When remodeling a house, architects are tasked with fixing or altering a previous architect's design. For Bill Willers, the previous architect turned out to be himself. In 2002 he completely renovated and added on to a... more »

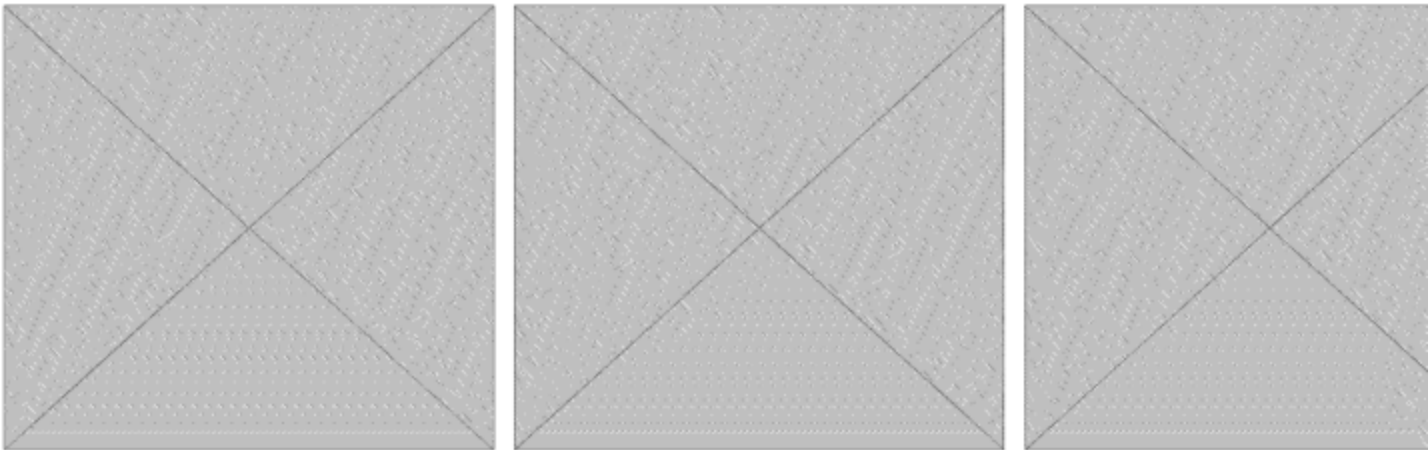

Color Feast: When to Use Orange in the Dining Room »

Orange is a high-energy, fun and friendly color, so it's perfect for the room where we break bread with family and friends. Orange oozes confidence. But for those who lack the confidence to test this outgoing hue in their... more »

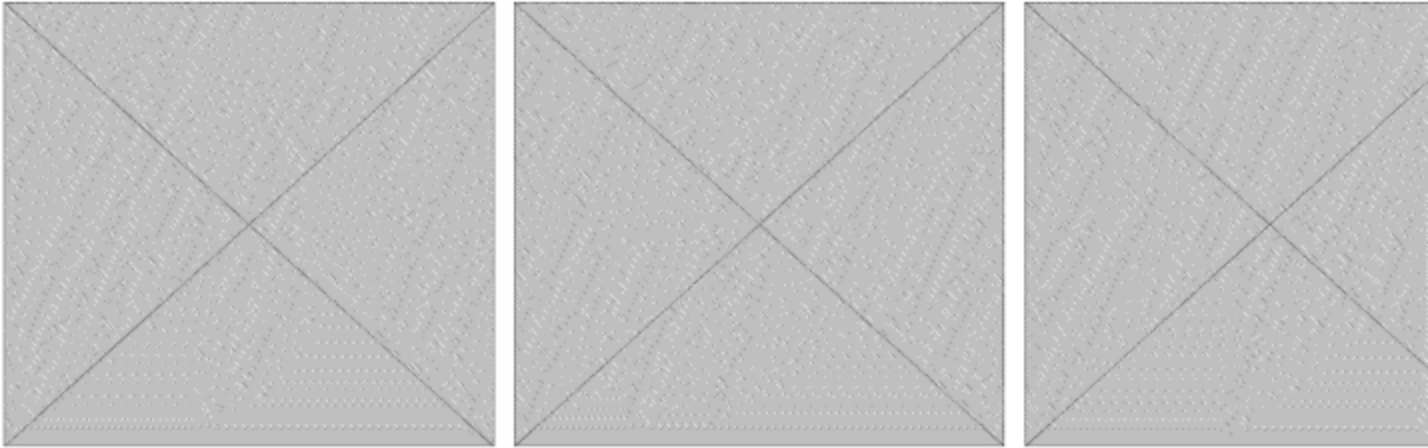

8 Ways to Tailor Your Home for You, Not Resale »

Forget for a moment everything you've heard about buying, renovating and decorating your home with resale in mind. Doesn't it seem as if that's been dominating the conversation for a long time now? During the boom times,... more »

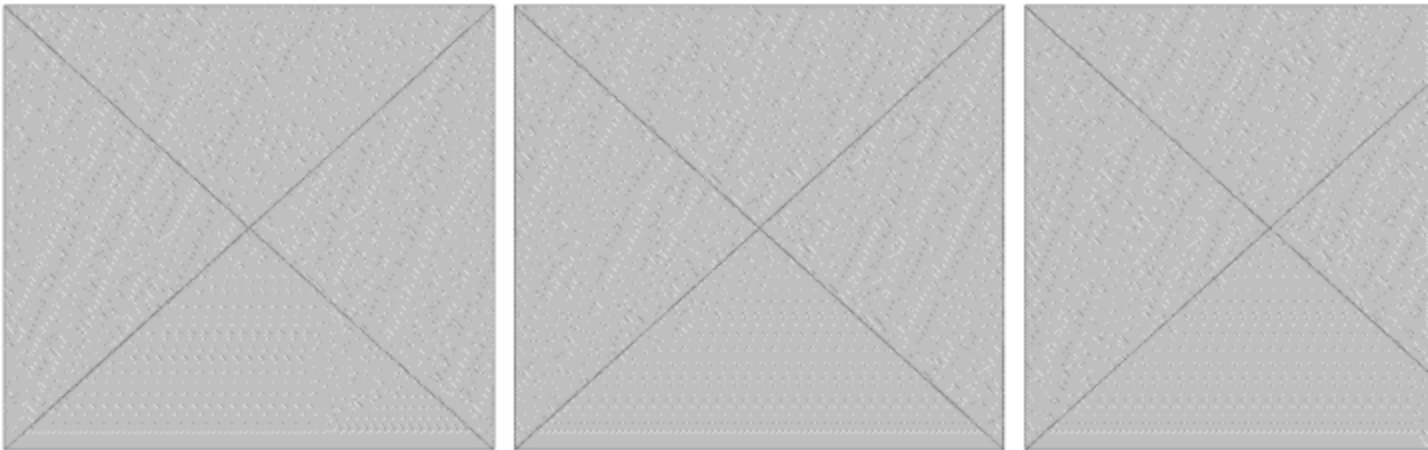

Houzz Call: What Home Collections Help You Feel Like a Kid Again

About once a year, I take down a tattered cardboard box from the top shelf in my closet and sift through my small collection of comic books and baseball cards. Admittedly, the first thing I do is check online to see if any... more »

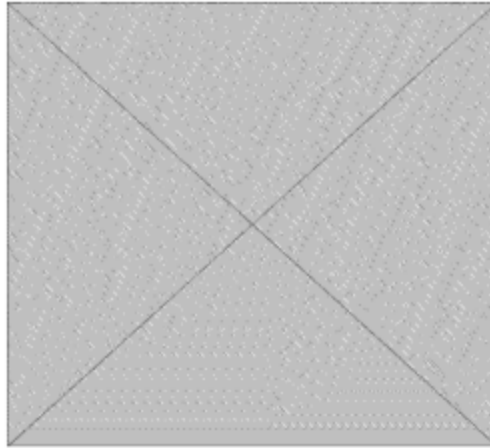

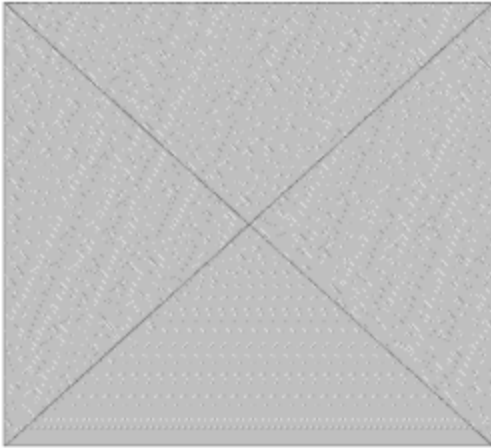

Sweet Ideas and a Truffle Recipe from a Chocolatier's Test Kitchen

Jane Morris' home kitchen started seeing a lot more action when she closed her popular Washington, D.C., chocolate boutique in March 2013 and began testing recipes for her new online store, J. Chocolatier. Producing fine... more »

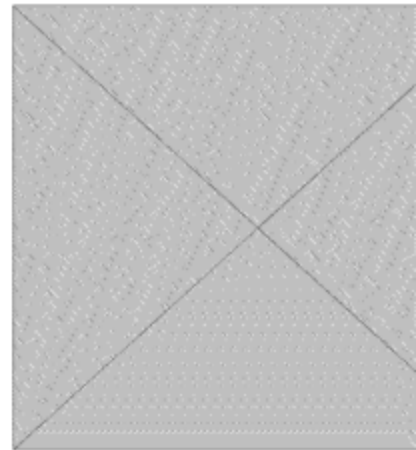

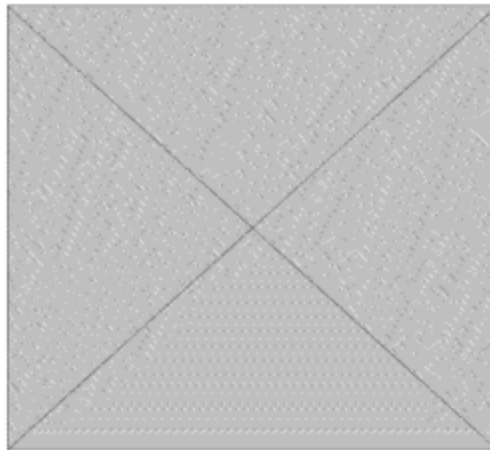

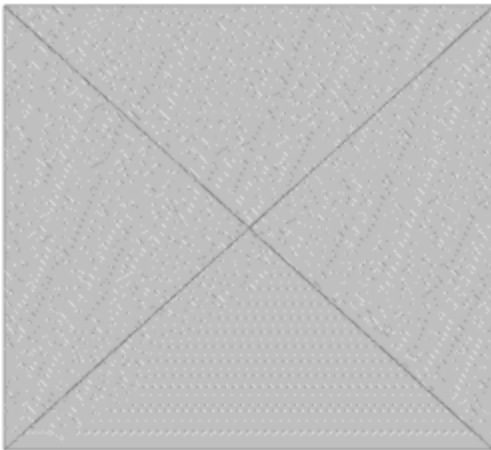

Kid Spaces: Ingredients of a Dream Playroom »

I've recently been engaged to design a playroom addition to a home that lacks a place for the kids to just have fun. The home is in a northern climate, so playing outdoors for much of the year isn't possible. There is no... more »

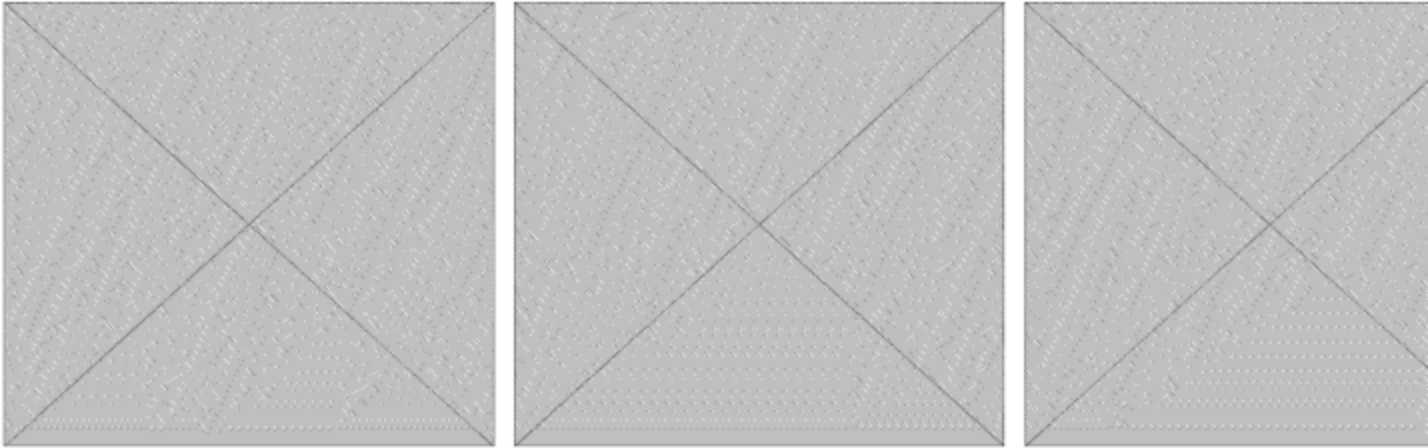

When Decorating Styles Collide: Practical Ways to Merge Tastes »

Blending two disparate looks, like contemporary and traditional, can be a source of conflict for many couples. Spark fly when someone's style is not as closely aligned with a partner's as thought. Coming up with an interior... more »

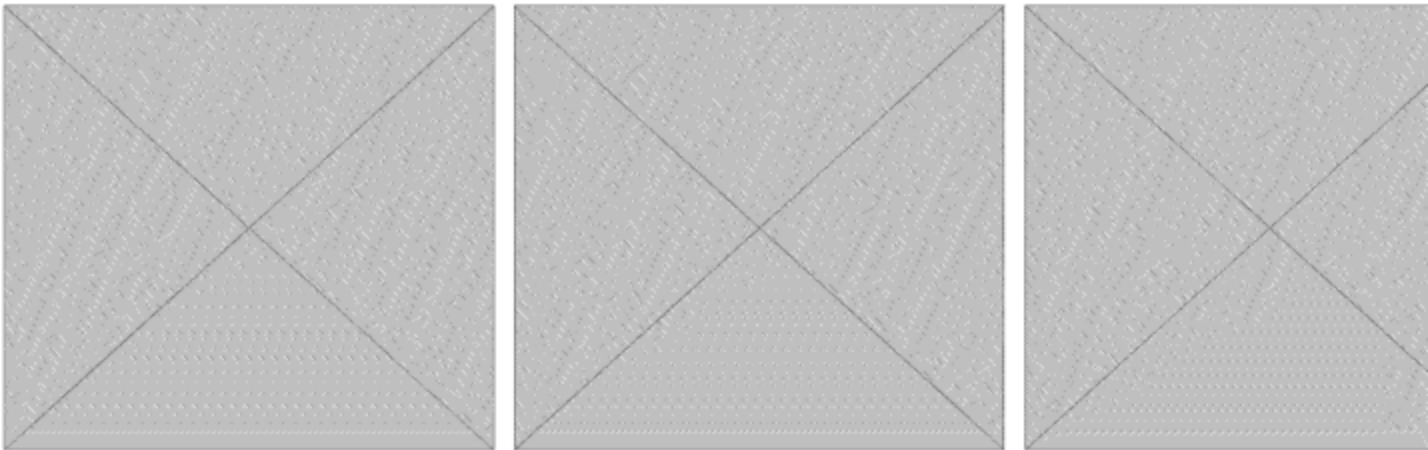

Turn Your Smart Phone Into a Home Security System »

A home security system is nothing more than sensors that detect what's going on in and around your home, plus equipment connected to those sensors that lets you monitor them. The main sensors, of course, are motion detectors,... more »

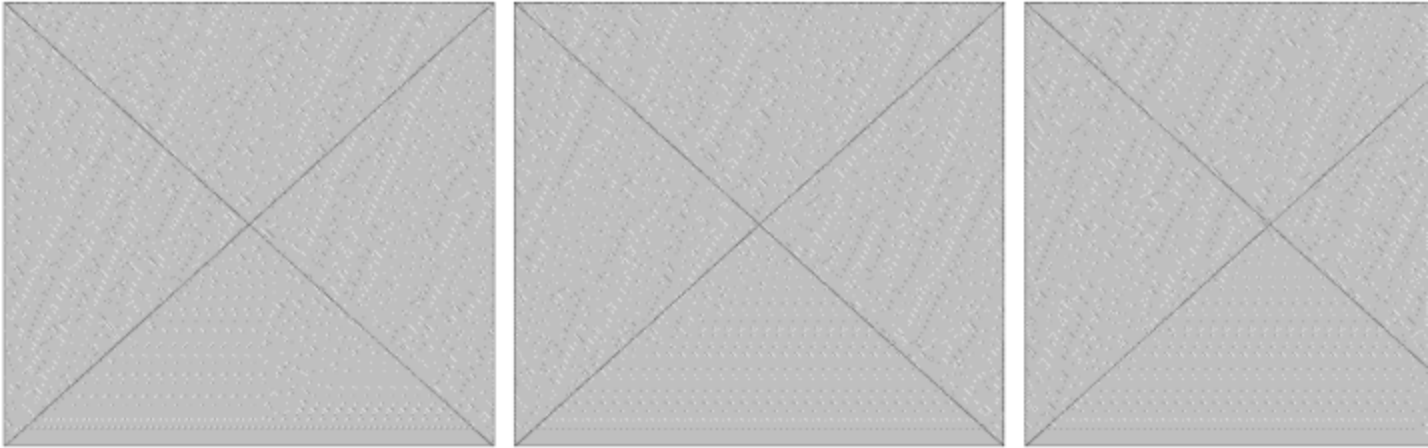

Houzz Tour: Design Harmony for an Animal Rescue Ranch »

Lori and Bob Morris have been rescuing unwanted and neglected animals, taking care of them, rehabilitating them and placing them in "forever" homes since 1982. They are so passionate about the animals that they had neglected... more »

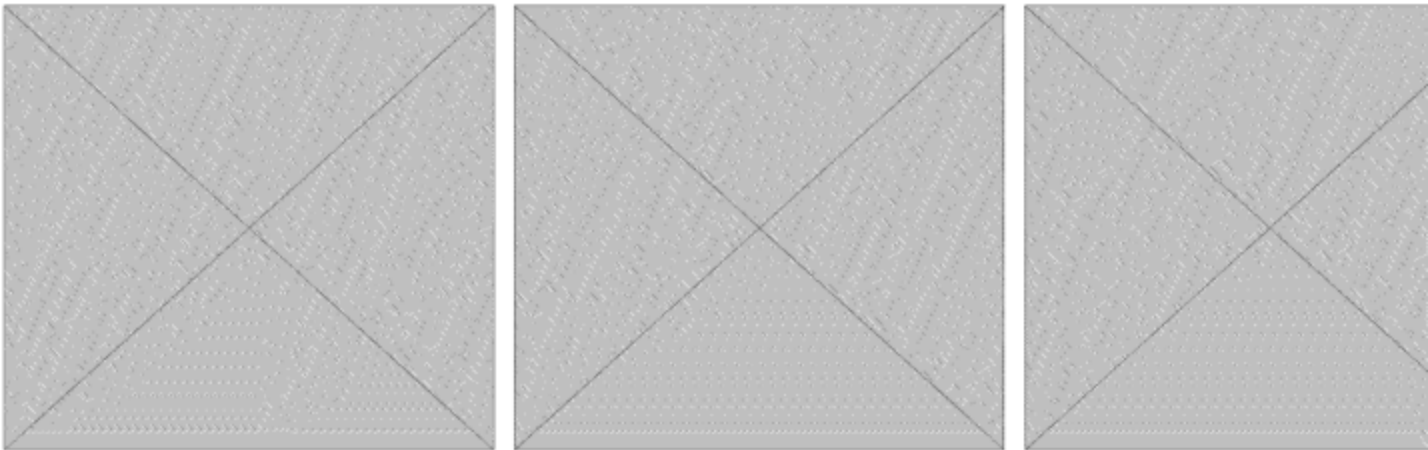

Great Design Plant: Mardi Gras Sneezeweed Throws a Color Party »

Late summer to me is about kicking back and enjoying the garden with friends and family, so I rely on easy-care plants to be the mainstay of my designs. Sneezeweed is often overlooked in favor of the better-known summer... more »

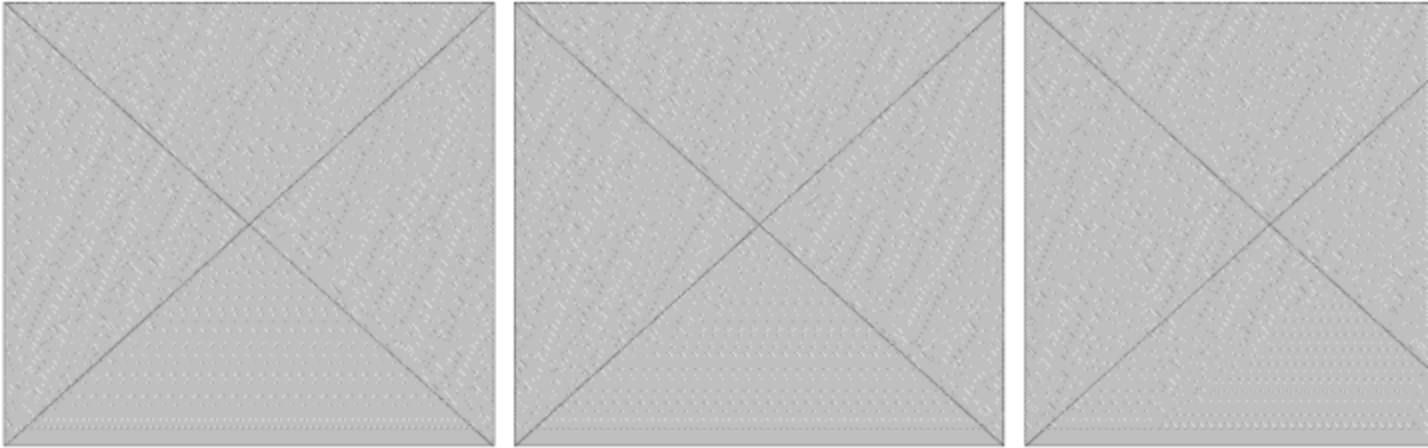

6 Lessons in Scale From Well-Designed Bathrooms »

How we mix objects of different sizes, masses, proportions and patterns — in other words, how we work with scale is a big part of good design. Architects and designers use scale to create interest and balance, and taking... more »

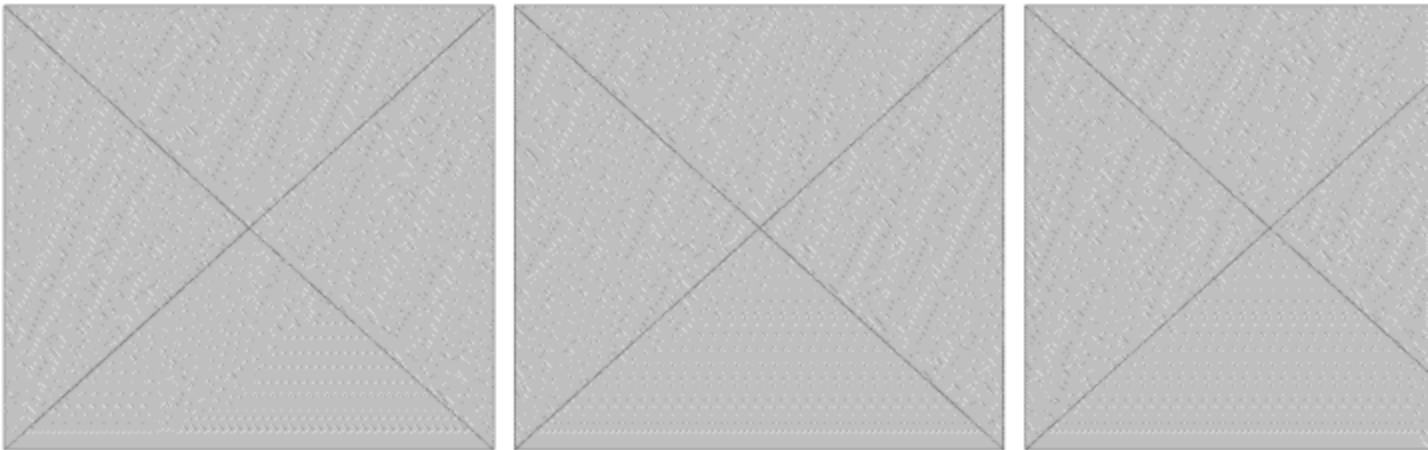

8 Clutter-Busting Garage Storage Solutions »

Our garages play a very important role in our everyday living. Of course, they protect our vehicles from the elements, but more often than not, they also become dumping grounds for tools, cleaning products and seasonal gear.... more »

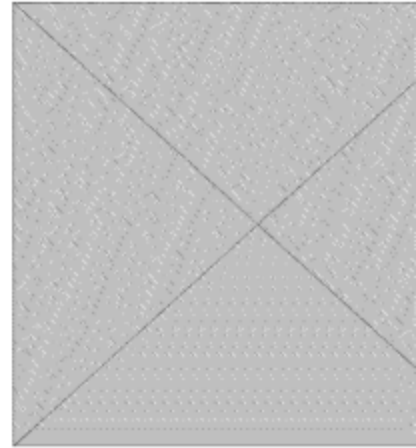

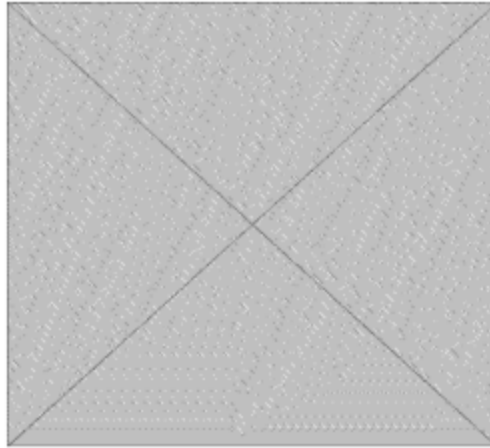

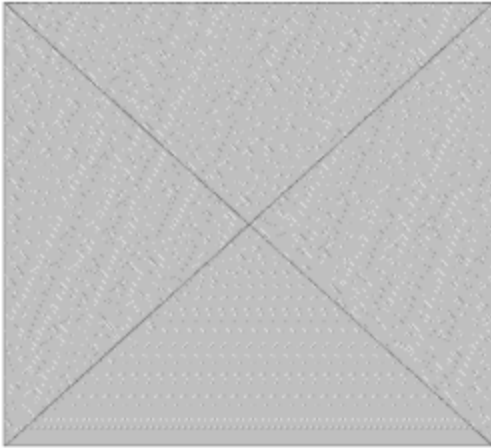

Herb Garden Essentials: Grow Your Own Delicious Mint »

First a word of warning: "Invasive" is the polite way to refer to mint's growing habits. In ideal, or even not so ideal, conditions, mint will take over your garden, spreading by underground roots. Consider it in the... more »

Say 'I Do' to Beautiful Wedding Memory Displays »

I was recently decorating for a young couple celebrating their first wedding anniversary. In the process of sorting through their wedding photos, I considered ways to remember a wedding day besides pictures or video. I wanted... more »

Ditch Shade Garden Gloom the Tropical Way »

During the hot days of summer, shade gardens are the most happening places for those who live in the tropics, but sometimes the darkness under the trees can get downright gloomy. Tropical plants are as bright and vibrant... more »

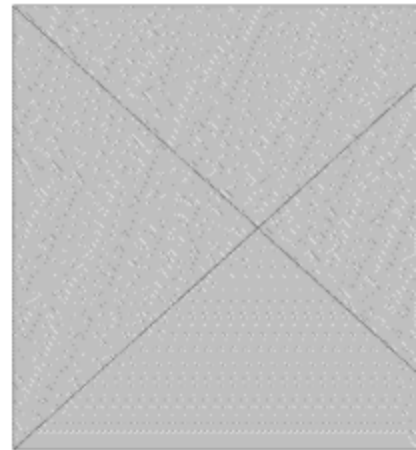

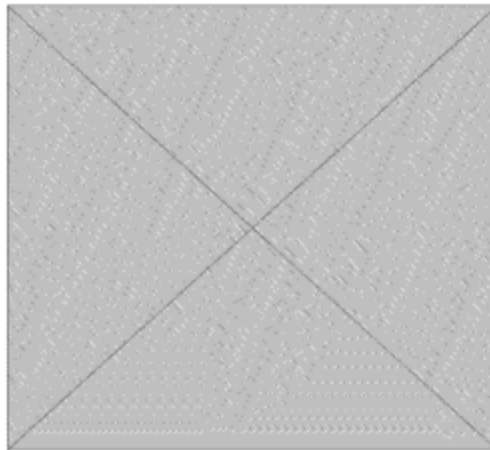

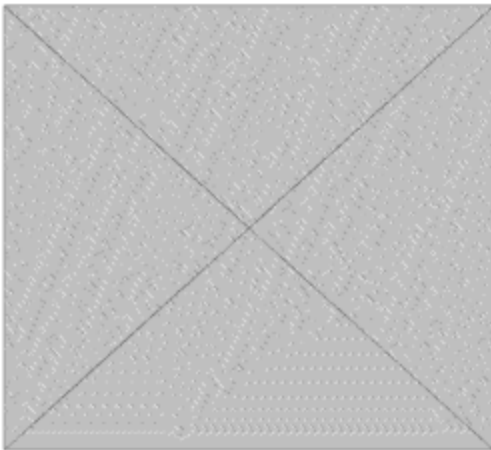

Thank U 4 the Gr8 Gift: How to Send Thanks in the Digital Age »

Etiquette has come a long way from the rules learned and passed down by our grandparents and parents. Not only interactions far more casual today (when was the last time you said "sir"?), but new technologies have... more »

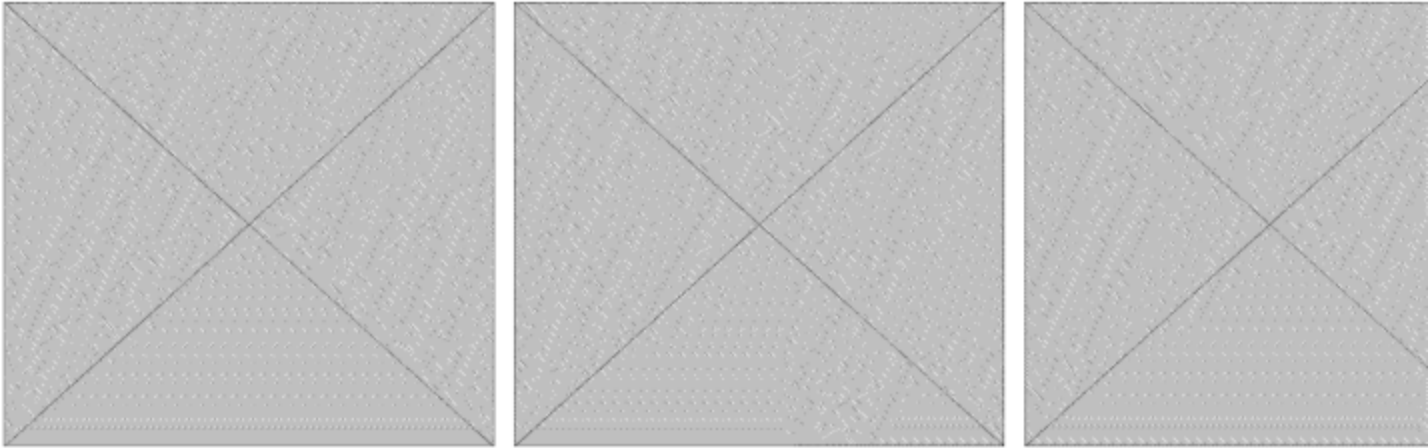

Improve Your Style Fortune With Lucky Bamboo »

Though somewhat similar in appearance, lucky bamboo is not the same thing as the stuff you may see growing wild quickly along your neighbor's property line. Lucky bamboo is part of the Dracaena genus, and most of us will... more »

Field Trip: Gather Ideas on a DIY Garden Tour »

Nothing beats taking a garden tour for inspiration and education. I am fortunate enough to live in an area with several annual garden tours, but for one reason or another, I've never been able to make even one of them. This... more »
