The issue was he hosts some of this stuff on his servers, and didn't want them down when the bots swept. He had just outlaid a couple of thousand bucks on some "rocking" hacking software to remove the videos, and he got caught short when the computers went down yesterday, and needed them repaired. That was the issue. He would have waited until next week, but then, we would have lost the large major changes. There was a lot accomplished this month, a tremendous amount.

I am dealing with programming teams and hackers, etc. These are not people of means.... They can't float anything..., but I get them to do a lot because both of us have been treating them well. So far, so good.... anyway, I am sure you understand the issue.

I m sorry, lets see what happens in a few days, as you now said the bots should change things.

Hi Jeff,

I am a little concern about your quick negative response for any additional payment to Mike. He has been working his tail off on this thing, and a number of his computers/servers are down, etc., and he needs some cash to repair. These things host some of your material... Going back to him tomorrow and telling him you said a quick "no" may not achieve the best results from someone I have been getting a tremendous amount of work out of, who responds immediately, and need on our good side. It has been an extraordinary effort. Just a thought between us. Thanks for your understanding in this....

Yours,
me
