I can only tell you what she is telling me. She said it was posted without her knowledge. She claims she just saw it today. They are not ignoring me at all.

I can certainly go to the editor in chief who is an old friend. However, she offered us the chance to correct errors, appeal issues that concern us. I would rather see how much we can get with her editor before I go to the top. He asked for an email pointing out the issues. We have an email we would like to send with your permission and the lawyers.

The Newsweek story was posted on The Daily Beast web site today. I got a call from the reporter apologizing and saying that it was posted without her knowledge and before she had a chance to fact check it with us. She said if we had any corrections we wanted made we could contact her editor. Before I did so, I wanted to check with you and the lawyers. I know the editor-in-chief at Newsweek. (See story here: <http://www.thedailybeast.com/blogs-and-stories/2011-04-01/bill-clinton-katie-couric-woody-allen-jeffrey-epsteins-society-friends-close-ranks/?cid=tag:all1>.)

Obviously, we would like to correct the headline (with respect to the pedophile reference), as well as a number of other items in the story, such as your having a "joker" smile and stating definitively that Roberts was your sexual plaything. (The reporter didn't write the headline and I think would agree that should be corrected.)

On a different, but related topic, we will have an op-ed for you to look at tomorrow. Please advise.

Mike
