one thing for sure Jeffrey is I recommend you buy an iphone that is for tethering only and maybe even the 4G device It would keep you and your team connected at all places where att 3 g is working just a thought but I am up for the challenge of resolving palm asap when my boots hit the ground but my guess is at least 4-8 hours as the original set up took close to 18 hours just a quick fyi testing up master bedroom network gear (sonos and airports) in office as I type

- Post Gary meeting, many challenges remain for him to pull the cables with 100% success by end of day. So the plan now it to set up as much gear as possible and test it in your office, then label that gear to be plugged in via gary, nick, jermaine, or whoever will be here when elec, fiber, painting, is out of the way for IT to do its job.
- emad is reporting his citrix working at hbrk, (please note he was very helpful when making this happen yesterday) which was rebuilt via iphone while i was taking am boat need confirmation from rest of staff
