Being fully present in the moment is not exactly the same thing as not carrying an umbrella. Didn't you ever carry an umbrella, and then have it not rain? I'm more interested in the meditation aspects, and I enjoy the possibilities of experiencing a few moments of peace and happiness everyday after 60 years of anxiety about the future. That's one good thing about aging, you finally appreciate the present moments. I'm very sorry to hear about Warren, I know how fond you are of him. He always could make you laugh. I just heard yesterday that John Palestrini is dying. hese guys are too young to go. I plan (ha-ha) to live until I'm 100, I hope you do, too.

Love,

living in the moment makes no sense. . enjoying the moment ok, but not carrying an umbrella , though the weather report clearly projects rain in the future , is silly, enjoy every moment. warren is dying, has a few months to go

Jeffrey,
Whenever you have a minute, I'd be interested in knowing your criticism of Buddhism.
