Subject: Website, etc.

Jeff,

Took the time to look a little more into that Wexler thing you wrote about yesterday. This is a post that does not come from us and is affiliated with a website that none of us have any connection to. The website is a cover for Rational Christianity (<http://ican-makemoney.com/?p=1908>), at the bottom of the article you will read: "...has aided and developed these efforts: at JeffreyEpsteinScience.com and JeffreyEpstein.org. He is encouraged and pumped up about the feedback from the scientific community of such recent announcements.

If you know anything about me, you would know that is nothing I would be associated with!, and "Rational Christianity" is a complete oxymoron! Sites like this, grab random content from the internet, repurpose it, and then post it, to keep the rating high. This is what we were trying to do, but we needed to do posting only associated with you. So, they evidently took the information from the website early on, and repurposed it, and posted it. We can't remove it, but we will write to them telling them that it is in error and request them to fix it.

On other matters, Mike and I are concerned that the project that we worked so hard on to achieve results is slipping away, and all that hard work is becoming undone by not adding fresh content, etc. Therefore, we have decided on our own (with your permission) to just freely (no charge) try to push it back to where we wanted it to go, i.e, clean. However, we can not do this at the pace we were doing before, but we are almost there anyway. We just need to add some relevant content, as the other links that we did got picked up, etc.

There are some things I do want to discuss with you about the island, and my time is running out on this issue. When can we speak? Or do you just want me to put my thoughts out in an email, and you can respond?

Best,
al
