Steve would really like to move on from his job. It would be devastating blow to the company but they would get over it. He's been there like 25 years.
He's never known another job as he has only worked there - he's worked just about every position there and the only job left is CEO. And the current CEO isn't going anywhere. Can you think of anywhere he could go or anything for him to do next? He's only 45 and super smart - really robust skills and eager. He could be the next Steve Jobs in terms of knock it out of the park stuff.
