Subject: Hej!

Hello Jeffrey - Hope you're doing well!

There's a lot that's been happening on my part - working on SALSS, building up the BBB website as new Global Head and working on a social venture to help the NYC homeless. Also, I'm not sure if you heard from Barbro, but I'm getting married! I finally fell in Love. The wedding will be in Sweden this summer - and planning a wedding, I can tell you, is a full-time job.

Jeffrey - I want to thank you again for the very generous loan of $5,000 you granted me and my roommates a year ago. My ex-roommate Nathalie and I split the loan $3,500 for me and $1,500 for her.

We have now had those funds released from the landlord. Prior to this however, my two roommates got in a terrible fight which ended in a financial dispute in which Nathalie in the midst of confusion walked away with $900 of the $5,000 you lent us. I have desperately tried to get this money back from Nathalie but she won't return my calls or answer my emails (I took sides).

In order to repay you, I recently received your account information from one of your assistants, Richard Khan, and made sure that I repaid my part, as well as the part of Nathalie's loan I had managed to get hold of, ASAP. Before the end of March, I wired $4,100 to your account.

This means that Nathalie still owes you $900. I have given Richard her telephone number and email, as she won't return my calls, and am not sure what else I can do at this point. I feel terrible. Working at Barbro's isn't exactly earning me a fortune - neither is social innovation - which makes it hard for me to take on Nathalie's obligation as well - especially with a wedding ahead.

Again, I feel terrible and am so sorry for Nathalie's lack of respect. I will keep trying to reach her but I think it would help if Richard did as well so that she understands the gravity of the situation.

Let me know.
Hope everything else is good!
