Venus Festival

Our lady is also the moon, called of some Selene, of others Luna, but by the wise LEVANAHA, for therein is contained the number of her name. . She is the ruler of the tides of flux and reflux. The waters of the great sea answer unto her, likewise the tides of all earthly seas, and she ruler the nature of woman.

But there is likewise in the souls of men a flowing and ebbing of the tides of life, which noone knoweth save the wise, and over these tides the great Goddess presides under the aspect of the moon. She comes from the sea as the evening star, and the magnetic waters of earth rise in flood. She sinks as Persephone in the western ocean and the waters flow back into the inner earth and become still in that great lake of darkness wherein are the moon and stars reflected. Whoso is still as the dark underworld lake of Persephone sees the tides of the unseen moving therein and knoweth all things. Therefore is lunar called the giver of visions.
