Welcome to the fifth issue of AJPara. Associate Editor James Houran has been very busy organising contributions from two up-and-coming parapsychologists, Annelisa Ventola and Devin Terhune. Both are students from overseas, Annelisa from the US and Devin from Canada. Both of them have taken the Summer Study Program at the Rhine Research Center in Durham, North Carolina. In addition, Devin won the Charles C. Tart award for a student of parapsychology, and as well a prize from the Academy of Religion and Psychical Research for an essay on mediumship. Annelisa contributes a book review, while Devin has a technical paper.

As to some of our other contributors, Lance Storm is well known, and recently graduated with a Ph.D. in psychology (specialising in parapsychology), while Colin Mitchell is a keen student of the subject. Montague Keen has long investigated the survival hypothesis in Great Britain. (I myself cannot call myself a newcomer, having begun parapsychological research in 1976!)

Please enjoy this issue.
