

Making Magickal Oils

Introduction

The Power of Magick resides in the Earth, the wind, the water, and in every living being, including ourselves. It is the power of life itself. When you work with herbs and oils you combine your own personal power with that of the plant. Through ritual, you give this combined power purpose and direction to bring about change.

When working with oils, rituals can be simple, such as anointing a candle with a single oil and burning the candle as you visualize your desired goal. Or, rituals can be more complex, using several oils blended together, to produce the best results. Oils can be added to water for a ritual bath. They are used in charms and sachets. Stones are rubbed with oils to boost their energies. Or you can bring the power of the oil into you by anointing your body with it. (note: always dilute a true essential oil with a base before applying to the skin) The uses are many, and you can use one method, or all, depending on the Magick you are working.

There are some schools of thought that believe ONLY true pure essential oils should be used in Magick works. The cost of these, however, is prohibitive to many practitioners. As a compromise, you can always start with just a few of the more expensive essential oils, using less expensive blends or synthetic oils until you can afford more. Personally, I have had great success using mostly synthetic oils, or by using substitutions. For example, if a recipe calls for oakmoss oil, you can combine vetivert oil with cinnamon oil to approximate the aroma of oakmoss.

Blended and single essential oils have many magickal uses. One could ask where does magick end and aromatherapy begin? To me they are closely linked. Aroma is used to heighten the senses and to have a definite and specific effect on the individual, and this as true of ritual as it is for aromatherapy.

As with herbs, essential oils have planetary and elemental correspondences and pagan associations which can be used to build up 'vibrational layers' in ritual work. This can range from blending them into incense to aid the invocation of a specific god or goddess, to using a single oil to anoint a candle to achieve a particular purpose by way of magick. Meditation on the god or goddess you wish to invoke, or a path-working for the purpose for which the oils are to be used is important, and the final blended aroma should strongly evoke a sense of the presence or purpose for which it has been made.

The magickal/ethical debate on using oils derived from animal origin has raged for years. My own personal view is that I never use animal ingredients; the God and Goddess know what is in the individual's heart, so under the ethos of "An it harm none" I substitute or, if aroma is crucial, I use a synthetic.

Correspondence lists are useful, but not all ingredients go together well when mixed - some oils can cancel each other out in terms of aroma when mixed. There is also a subjective element, and choosing the ones that suit you best can be like going round the perfume or aftershave counters in a department store! For example, Clary Sage oil is usually recommended as relaxing, but I find it has the opposite effect on me, and is more uplifting, so I tend to 'go with what works' when choosing oils for personal use. Your own mood and nose will tell you what is right for you.

Are essential oils safe to use?

Most essential oils are relatively safe, but many, because of their highly concentrated state are mildly toxic when undiluted, and some are highly toxic. It is recommended that the use of blended oils be at a dilution of no more than 4% essential oil to a base of pure vegetable based carrier oil. There are only a few commonly available oils that are still dangerously toxic at that dilution, including Common Sage, Pennyroyal, Camphor, Mugwort, Rue, Cinnamon, Cassia and Wintergreen. These oils should never be used in blends that will be put on the skin. For safety's sake, never take essential oils, or magickal oil blends, internally, never put any oils in or near mucous membranes (eyes, ears, nose, mouth etc.) and be cautious when putting oils on the skin.

**You will read and reread "do a skin test" and/or "check for an allergic reaction" plenty of times in this book. It may seem redundant, but it is necessary! You don't want to do more harm to a person or pet. You want to help them, so remember the fact that some people and animals may have adverse reactions to certain oils and oil blends.**

Recommended starter oils

Most of these oils are easy to obtain in most places in the US. The "Common Name" is what the oil is likely to be listed as on the label. The "Botanical Name" is given so that you can verify that you are getting the true essence. The "Approximate Cost" is a very useful indicator. True essential oils are rarely sold at a 'discount'. Even if the label says the oil is a genuine essential oil, if it costs much less than indicated here, it is likely to be a blend or any synthetic oil -- and you need to know that in Magickal Oil craft. Some oils are especially hard to find during times of political unrest because certain natural substances from which these essentials are created are found in unique geographic locations. It is increasingly hard to find good quality for many of the resins because of the political unrest in Africa and the Middle East.

Common Name Botanical Name Elemental Aspect Planetary Aspect Source of Oil: Note*: Toxicity Information**: Appx. Cost of Pure Essence***

Bergamot Citrus bergamia Water Venus fruit Top Do not use on skin that will be exposed to sun; Phototoxic $24.00 per oz

Clary Sage Salvia sclarea Water Neptune leaf Middle Avoid if Pregnant; Do not use when drinking alcohol; Overuse can cause headaches $26.70 per oz.

Clove Syzygium aromaticum Fire Mars leaf/bud Top Not recommended for use

Sandalwood Santalum album Air Uranus wood/ bark Base Minimal Toxicity $34.00 per oz

Vetiver Vetiveria zizanoides Earth Pluto leaf Base Minimal Toxicity $26.00 per oz.

\ Base notes last longest, Top notes are the weakest and will dissipate quickly if exposed to air. Middle notes hang in longer than Top notes, but not as long as Base notes. **

**Pregnant women should take extreme care when using oils or heavily scented products of any kind. Seek expert advice regarding the safe use of oils during this time. Also: All citrus oils have some risk of phototoxicity. ** it is always possible for anyone to have an allergic reaction to any oil or oil blend. When using oils on skin, be aware of any reactions that seem to be happening, and take first aid measures immediately. Flush the area with a lot of clean water and seek medical attention. Take the same steps (flush with clean water, seek medical help) if you spill undiluted essentials on yourself, or get them in your eyes, nose, mouth or an open wound.

**These are approximate prices only, however, if you see essences offered at significantly below these approximate prices, be aware that they are most likely synthetic or blended. True essences are sold in 1/8 to 1 oz bottles.**

True essences blended with organic carrier oils (not mineral oil or propylene glycol) are preferable to synthetic or "nature-identical" essences.

Again, some believe that synthetic or "nature-identical" oils have no place in magickal oil craft.

What are oils used for in magick?

Essential oils and blended oils can be used for a multitude of uses in magick. Such as: anointing, healing, cleansing, blessing, banishing and empowering.

What can be anointed? Nearly everything! Candles, tools, even people when care is taken to make sure the oils used are non toxic and that there is no allergic reaction to the receiver of the oil or oil blend.

What can be healed? How about a broken heart? Or maybe even a headache? There are so many ways to use oils in healing the list is virtually endless. Learn about the oils, their properties of healing, and the best ways to transmit that healing energy and get to work! Always use caution when working a healing. First ALWAYS ask the recipients permission before doing ANY working for them. Some people just don't want to be healed. Or, they may not be ready to be healed. Always offer, but never act without permission. Second, make sure the recipient will have no adverse physical reactions to the oils you are using.

What can be cleansed? Nearly everything! Not only is, lets say, Lavender oil great for cleaning and disinfecting a wound or a kitchen counter top, but it is also a great oil to use to ritually cleanse one or all of you magickal tools. Of course the way you use the oil and the proportions in which it is mixed vary for each of these uses, the cleansing effects are still phenomenal.

What can be blessed? Again, anything that is or isn't nailed down...including the nails! Magickal tools, people, pets, your home, anything that you want to bless. Remember to skin test any people or pets that you will use an oil on, check for an allergic reaction before proceeding with a blessing.

What can be banished? Feelings of loss, guilt, stress, depression, heartbreak, unhealthy habits, unhealthy people, negativity in any of its nasty forms...anything that doesn't make a positive contribution to your life!

What can be empowered? A talisman, your ritual or magickal tools, your altar, your bedroom, a poppet, your checkbook...another endless list of possibilities.

Be creative and be careful!

What oils are used?

Pure essential oils and pure vegetable based carrier oils are used for magickal purposes. Synthetic oils, "Fragrance" oils, and all petroleum-based oils should not be used in Magickal oil craft.

Essential oils are concentrated, pharmacologically active substances pressed or distilled from blossoms, leaves, bark, sap, resins, roots, and fruits of various plants and trees. The essence retains the magickal correspondences associated with the source from which it was taken, and therein lies the clue to using oils magickally. Pure essential oils vary dramatically in price. Some retail for over $500 for one ounce. They are measured in "drop by drop" proportions.

Carrier oils are mild, pure oils that are used to dilute and increase the amount of oil made from the concentrated essential oils. They are used to make oil blends cost less and last longer. Carrier oils also referred to as base oils or vegetable oils are used to dilute essential oils, CO2s and absolutes before applying to the skin. They "carry" the essential oil onto the skin. Different carrier oils offer different properties and the choice of carrier oil can depend on the therapeutic benefit being sought.

Carrier oils are generally cold-pressed vegetable oils derived from the fatty portions of the plant. Unlike essential oils that evaporate and have a concentrated aroma, carrier oils do not evaporate or impart their aroma as strongly as essential oils.

Examples of carrier oils are sweet almond, apricot kernel, grapeseed, hemp, avocado, peanut, olive, pecan, jojoba, macadamia nut, sesame, evening primrose, walnut and wheat germ. Most oils bought in the grocery store are not cold-pressed. Instead, the oils are heated and therefore have less magickal benefit.

The most common and preferred carrier oils are jojoba, almond, grapeseed, and apricot kernel oil. Jojoba oil is actually a liquid form of wax, and resists aging and oxidization better than any other carrier, but it is also one of the most expensive carriers. grapeseed, almond and apricot kernel are high quality and relatively inexpensive.

Because purchasing pure essential oils can be very costly for a beginner, It is recommended that you begin by purchasing high quality, fresh blended oils - that is, pure essential oils already diluted in high quality carrier oil. If you select single oils, one essence in one carrier oil, you can mix blended oils together with good magickal results, experimenting inexpensively, and getting a good background in what works for you before investing a great deal of money.

How To Choose Quality Essential Oils

In light of the thousands of essential oil selling companies inhabiting the Internet of late, how do you know you are getting real essential oil and not fragrance oil instead? This is a problem many practitioners have found all too common. Companies creating extremely low grade essential oil or calling fragrance oils "Aromatic Essential Oils". They get around the "pure" part by replacing it with "Aromatic". Unlike base oil, essential oils are volatile substances which many times don't feel oily at all. These extremely concentrated extracts contain many of the plants chemical makeup. Only high grade essential oils should be used in blending magickal oils.

Almost all essential oils, since ancient Egyptian time has been created in a number of grades --1st grade, 2nd grade and so forth. In addition to this, many essential oils are adulterated with fillers. These fillers can be of cheaper to produce essential oils that smell somewhat similar. The essential oil producers know that the general public many times does not know what real jasmine or myrrh smells like so they take advantage. Throwing in whatever cheaper substance they have around. In addition to this, low-grade base oils are also frequently used. Paying special attention to the essential oil bottles ingredient label is very important. If there isn't any, pass and don't buy it! Many of these sorts of essential oils can be found sold on the street or at fairs and so forth. While they may say essential oils on the label, they are really not for magickal use. The ingredients on the label should say "pure jasmine" or "pure myrrh". If you can afford it, it's better to buy undiluted essential oils because you can mix it yourself with jojoba or sweet almond. At least you know what is being blended with it. Organically grown essential oils are also a very smart choice when considering brands. Also look for steam distilled, as this extraction process uses water instead chemical solvents. Some of the better brands of essential oils may cost more but they are worth the money. If you're serious about using essential oils in your workings, save up and buy 1 or 2 really useful ones instead many cheap ones that will give dismal results.

How to buy pure essential oils

It is recommended that you buy pure, natural essential oils from reputable manufacturers, this we all now know. Since "pure" and "natural" have no legal definitions, Follow these suggested guidelines:

1. True essential oils are sensitive to light, so they should always be packaged in amber, cobalt-blue or deep-green bottles.

2. "Natural" should mean the absence of such commonly permitted substances as synthetically diluted, mineral oils and emulsifying agents.
3. "Pure" should mean the absence of similar essential oils.
4. The label should list the Latin name of the plant (to verify its botanical origin) as well as the part of the plant used to create the oil.
5. To judge whether the essential oil is of good quality, pour one drop into the palm of your hand. The oil should be absorbed, and the area where you poured it should feel dry. If after a few seconds it leaves a slight oily film on your skin, it means it has been diluted with synthetics or other methods of dilution.

Above all, smell a lot of different oils to develop a discriminating "nose." Imagine pressing an orange peel, seeing the little droplets and catching a whiff of that almost burning scent. The scent is very strong but very pure. You should have this sensation when you smell any essential oil.

Do the carrier oils have magickal properties?

The most common oils used as carrier oils are considered to be multi-purpose, although technically they certainly have some kind of correspondence derived from the source from which they are made. You can use any of the carriers listed in the carrier oil list for any magickal purpose. Their correspondences will not interfere with your intended purposes.

Is it possible to make mistakes when blending oils?

It's possible, but unlikely. The worst thing that could happen is that you achieve a blend with an unusual or even bad odor! If you keep your blends simple at first, no more than 2 or three oils together, you are unlikely to create anything too awful. Use the table of correspondences or a formulary to make sure your oils correspond to the correct essence for your desired intent.

What else can you add to oils for magickal purposes?

You can add crystals, stones, and herbs to oil blends to give them additional influences and energies. As long as the object will fit through the neck of the oil bottle and is non-toxic, you can add nearly anything you like.

Some suggestions:

A crystal to add extra power to a stock bottle of oil. (Make sure the crystal is completely clean before adding it to the stock.)

Flower blossoms in love oils.

Small pieces of dried fruit in prosperity oils.

Seeds in fertility blends.

Galangal root (Low John) and High John the Conqueror root can be added to any blend to increase it's potency and power.

What makes an oil blend magickal?

An oil blend is just an oil blend unless it has been charged. Charging is the name for the process by which objects are consecrated to magickal use and empowered with magickal intent. This is usually done in a ritual manner, or through a spell.

How to charge your oil blend:

There are many different ways to charge and empower magickal mixtures. The following is a simple step-by-step procedure that can be used to charge almost anything, including your oil blends:

- 1) Take three deep breaths, and calm and center yourself. You, and your energy, are the primary component in the charging process.
- 2) Hold the container of oil between both hands. Raise it and clasp it to the center of your chest.
- 3) See in your mind's eye a symbol of the purpose for which the blend was made. For example: if it is a Goddess oil, you may bring up an image of the Lady. If you cannot think of a specific image, just see bright light from the Sun, the Earth, the Sea, the Moon or another great Earthly or Celestial power.
- 4) Begin to gather energy from the earth, breathing and drawing it up into your chest, and sending it through one or both hands into the container of oil.
- 5) See the image you have created coming from a long distance away, growing larger and larger, finally coming straight to you, and going into the container of oil.
- 6) As the image goes into the container, send all the rest of the energy through your hand or hands into the oil, and repeat the following incantation or use a similar spell wording:

"By the Power of the Lady and Lord,

I consecrate this oil for magickal use,

and empower it to: (state purpose of oil)

By the power of three times three,

To cause no harm nor return on me.

This oil be a tool for my magick.

So Mote It Be!"

7) Ground all unused energies after this operation. The oil is now magickal, and should be handled carefully and with respect.

Can you tell if an oil is charged?

Yes. You can use a pendulum to check oils. You may notice that if an oil blend goes rancid, it will "lose" its charge as the volatile components are destroyed by oxidation. If your pendulum swings freely over the bottle of oil, it has or still has a charge to it. If it does not swing freely, it no longer holds a magickal charge. Check the freshness of your oil blends on a regular basis. You cannot "recharge" your oils that have gone rancid, but you can use fresh, strongly charged oils to "recharge" most other tools between ritual cleansings and re-consecrations.

How do you properly anoint tools and people?

You do not need to use a lot of oil when anointing. Take a small amount on your power finger (your power finger is the middle finger on your dominant hand). It should not be enough to drip. Keep in mind that carrier oils can stain and spot fabric and leather. Gently touch the person or the object that you are anointing and say a blessing or a consecration: drawing the sign of the god or goddess or even a pentagram will add to the magickal benefits of the anointing.

"The Lord and Lady bless you."

or

"This Thing be now Hallowed"

or

"By Her Will we are made Whole"

See in your mind's eye the energy of the oil going into the person or thing.

What body parts are safe for anointing people?

Generally the forehead between the eyes; also known as the third eye. Do not use too much oil or it will drip. Some people like to make a solar cross (Forehead, Chest, Right Shoulder, Left Shoulder) or a pentagram (Forehead, Right Hip, Left Shoulder, Right Shoulder, Left Hip, Forehead.). Other people anoint the tops of the feet, the backs of hands, the knees, the shoulders... main rule is not any mucous membrane or any body part that would make someone uncomfortable. Keep in mind that oil can stain fabric and some leathers, and be light with your touch.

*Remember also that not all oils are safe to use on the skin. Check the toxicity chart if you have any questions, and never apply essential oils to the skin undiluted*

How are tools anointed?

Lightly anoint the flat of the blade of the Athame. Anoint the back of most decorative pentacles. Anoint both tips of Wands and Staves, or rub the oil lightly down the length.

The general rules are:

- 1) Where the oil will not make use of the object dangerous (not on handles, not on floors, not in cups that may be used for beverages)*
- 2) Not where the oil will stain or damage the person or object: not in the middle of robes, not on the lips, not on anything plastic.*

How to anoint candles:

Make sure the candle is clean and the wick is trimmed.

Method one: Dab oil on to the middle of the candle and work it out to the ends, "pulling" the oil from the center out to the ends, and turning the candle in your hands as you go.

Method two: Dab oil onto your power finger and work from the top down to the bottom of the candle to "pull" your intent toward you. This method is used for prosperity and healing workings. If you "push" your intent away from you, working the candle from bottom to top, this would be used to rid your life of negative influences such as bad habits or poverty.

Method three: Pour a small amount of oil into the top of a glass encased pillar candle. You can also use a porcupine quill or similar object to poke small holes into the top of the candle as a "cup" to hold the oil.

Method four: Anoint a large un-encased pillar candle much as you would a person, by drawing a solar cross, a pentacle or other symbol on the side of the candle with the oil.

Then charge the candle using the method outlined above.

How to mix essential oils:

You will need clean, dry tightly cap-able/cork-able bottles for your blended oils. Amber or cobalt blue bottles are best to protect oils from light and heat, which causes oxidation (rancidity). You may also want droppers, funnels.

Work on a clean, dry workspace. Use one dropper per stock bottle, to keep your oils from being contaminated by other oils in the process of blending. You can also keep a bowl or other container of rubbing alcohol to “wash” your used droppers in.

If you are using blended oils, you will not need to dilute them. If you are using essential oils, you must dilute them first.

Method for blending essential oils and carrier oils:

Essential oils are pharmacologically active substances. They have definite effects on the body's systems, and so must be handled with respect and caution. Never use more 12 total number of drops essential oil to 1 Tbs carrier. (24 drops essence to 1 oz carrier; 1 tsp essence to 1/2 c carrier) This means that if you have a particularly complex blend (comprising more than 12 drops or parts in total) you will need to divide the total number of drops by 12 to determine how many parts of carrier oil will be needed at minimum to safely dilute the concentrated essences to a 4% solution:

Total number of drops divided by 12 = number of tablespoons of carrier oil needed for the maximum safe concentration per tablespoon of carrier

Example:

3 parts rose = 12 drops

2 parts sandalwood = 8 drops

1 part clove = 4 drops

total # of drops = 24 drops divided by 12 = 2 Tbs or 1 oz carrier oil (Jojoba or Almond)

Figure the recipe first, planning out the size of the bottle needed to contain the final blend including all the carrier oil. Measure the drops of essence into the bottle, and add the carrier to the essences. Cap tightly and turn the bottle gently to mix.

To prevent contamination of the stock bottles use drop-top bottles or clean, dry glass droppers or pipettes. Most Essential oils will keep indefinitely, but a few, particularly the citrus based oils (Lemon, Orange, Grapefruit, Tangerine...) may turn. Your carrier oil stock will need to be checked monthly to insure freshness. If the scent of a bottle of essential oil or carrier oil suddenly changes or becomes unpleasant, throw it out and refresh your stock. Rancid oil has no place in magickal oil crafting.

Using pure essential oils can be a lot more complex, expensive and messy. I'm recommending you use blended oils to begin your oil studies, which will eliminate the need for you to do complex planning at first.

How to mix blended oils:

Write your recipes down in parts or percentages. Figure out how much oil you need, and base your "parts" on that measurement:

Each of the following recipes shows a similar proportion. But each recipe makes a different amount of oil.

Recipe #1

3 Parts Rose

2 Parts Sandalwood

1 Part Clove

Recipe #2

3 drops Rose

2 drops Sandalwood

1 drop Clove

Recipe #3

1 ½ tsp. Rose

1 tsp. sandalwood

½ tsp. clove

Cheater method for making mixed oil from blended oils:

If you buy your oils from a store where all the bottles are the same size, you can measure by the bottle. The recipe above would end up being:

3 bottles of rose + 2 bottles of sandalwood + 1 bottle clove

The biggest problem with this method is that it makes a lot of oil, and sometimes it's hard to find a large enough container. Look for cruet bottles used for salad oil.

How much carrier oil do I need?

Basic altar blessing oil, for use on candles, tools: Depending on how much you use. If you do a lot of candle magick, you may use it all the time. It is best to start with 2 oz.

Ritual Anointing Oil - for use on people: Make small amounts, no more than 1 tbs. at a time. This ensures fresh oil for each application, and the oil can be specifically tailored to the occasion.

Ritual Bath Oil - for use on people: Put no more than 1 tbs. of any oil in a single bath for safety's sake. Make up as much as you will use within a month

Offering Oil to be poured out to the earth as a gift Make about 1/2 to 1 cup of the finest oils you can afford.

Ritual Ointments and Pastes Ointments last a lot longer than liquid oil blends, especially if they are made with beeswax, but they don't keep forever! Make 1/4 to 1/2 cup at a time, using 1/8 to 1/4 c each of wax and oil.

Ritual Body Oil: to be rubbed all over skin after the ritual bath in preparation for the rites: This is used up fast if it is not kept in an economical pump-style container. Use canola and jojoba together for best results and make 1 - 2 c.

Now that you know how much oil you will be making, you can determine how many drops of essential you can put in to your blend.

Never use more than the suggested amount for safety and economy. Essential oils are concentrated, and a very small amount will effectively go a long way. You won't need any more than this to make a potent blend, and in most cases, you can use far less than the amount listed here.

Safety Table

Total amount of carrier oil used in blend: Maximum safe amount of Essential Oil

1 tablespoon (1/2 oz): Use no more than 12 drops

2 tbs (1 oz): No more than 24 drops or 1/4 tsp

4 tbs (2 oz): No more than 48 drops or 1/2 tsp

1/2 cup (4 oz): No more than 96 drops or 1 tsp

1 cup (8 oz): No more than 190 drops or 2 tsp

2 cups (16 oz): No more than 384 drops or 4 tsp

Dram: a unit of liquid capacity equal to 1/8 fluid ounce.

If you don't already know what carrier oil you are going to use as a base for your blend, use this information to guide you in making a good choice. Sometimes, more than one substance would make a good choice, and sometimes you may wish to use a blend of ingredients. You can often get away with using a larger amount of a less expensive carrier oil with a small amount of more expensive one, to get a fine result. Such as making up large quantity of blended oils in an almond oil base with a small amount of jojoba added to help preserve the mixture. This is a lot less expensive than using all pure jojoba oil.

More safety tips

Children: Always TEST first to make sure there is no allergic reaction!

The following oils are considered safe for children. Please do not exceed recommended dosages. Babies & Children should use only a 1% Dilution which means 1 drop of oil to 2 tsp. of carrier oil.:

Carrier Oils:

Name Type Best Use Cost Factor (Approximate)

Almond Light to medium weight oil Easy to obtain, widely used for all kinds of blends $1.00 per oz.

Apricot Kernel A light weight oil, mild Harder to obtain than Almond, fine odorless qualities make this a good choice for finer blends $.91 per oz

Beeswax A Honey-scented deep yellow solid wax. The best base for making ointments and creams. Must be melted over a double boiler to blend. Mix 1/2 and 1/2 with any other oil to make a basic ointment. $2.00 per oz

Canola Very light oil, completely odorless, resists oxidation Good shelf life makes this the perfect choice for blends made in large quantities $.80 per oz

Cocoa Butter A solid but easily melted wax with a light, creamy texture. Good for making ointments and pastes; melt over double boiler to blend $1.85 per oz

Grapeseed Very light oil, penetrates skin quickly-solvent extracted Blends for use in anointing candles, but solvent extraction means some people may react badly to skin application $.77 per oz

Jojoba Actually a liquid wax, very stable, resists oxidation Wonderful for blends to be applied to body; add some to any oil blend to help it resist oxidation $3.00 per oz.

Lanolin Animal product; considered a wax, it has a thick, technically liquid consistency Rich ingredient for ointments; melt over double boiler to blend $1.49 per oz.

Sesame Very light oil with many healing properties Penetrates skin quickly. General use; good with strongly scented blends $.77 per oz

Shea Butter Stiff but not solid, grainy wax product that becomes smooth and sticky when melted. Thickens ointments and pastes quickly; can be used alone as a simple ointment or paste; melt over double boiler to blend. $4.15 per oz.

Be aware that many oils have a yellow or brown tint in their natural form. Often, solvents are used to bleach the oil, making it more "acceptable" for commercial uses. Sometimes, people can have allergic reactions to the residues of solvents used to bleach oils. I recommend that you use natural forms of the carrier oils whenever possible.

And speaking of allergies in general -- it is always possible for anyone to have an allergic reaction to any oil or oil blend. When using oils on skin, be aware of any reactions that seem to be happening, and take first aid measures immediately. Flush the area with a lot of clean water and seek medical attention. Take the same steps (flush with clean water, seek medical help) if you spill undiluted essentials on yourself, or get them in your eyes, nose, mouth or an open wound.

Now that you know:

What you are making (i.e. Anointing Oil for Candles) and How much carrier oil you need. (i.e. One Tablespoon)

How much essential oil you need. (i.e. up to 12 drops)

And

What kind of carrier oil you will be using. (i.e. Grapeseed Oil)

You can start figuring out what kind of essential oils to use to make the best correspondences for your blend.

General remarks about blended oils:

The longer a blend is allowed to sit the more the scents will "marry". Blended oils made mainly of blossom or leaf oils may lose their scent quickly if left uncapped for even a short period of time. Adding a little oil from a resin (amber, frankincense, myrrh, benzoin, copal) or from one of the perfumer's fixatives (vetiver, oakmoss, balsam) may help keep or "fix" floral scents, but it won't fix a blend which has lost its scent. Keep your oil blends away from heat and light, which can cause them to oxidize and turn rancid very quickly. A little jojoba oil, added when the blend is fresh, will help keep it from turning. Maximum shelf life for blended oils is about six months. Label and date all your oil blends.

Fast Luck Oil

The Good Spell Book by Gillian Kemp

3 1/2oz safflower base
2 drops Cinnamon
2 drops Verbena
Keep mustard seeds in master bottle
Color: Golden Yellow

Use this oil and luck will come to you in a hurry. Mix it with water for a floor wash to bring business success. It will attract customers and clients. For love, anoint a red mojo bag filled with equal parts of rose, lavender, and orris root. Carry near your body daily and place by your bedside at night. To gain fast luck in gambling, anoint your palms and a botswana agate and carry when you play. For mighty forces to come to your aid when your luck seems to be fleeing, lay a buckeye between two candles. A green to the left and a white to the right. Anoint the candles and buckeye with the oil. Light the candles and let them burn out completely. Then place the buckeye in a red flannel bag along with a seal of magick which is designed to bring magical assistance to one's wishes, desires, needs, or requests. Carry the bag with you at all times, anointing it every seventh day with the fast luck oil. It is said to bring material wealth into the environment of the wearer.

Fast Money Oil

7 drops patchouli
5 drops cedarwood
4 drops vedivert
2 drops ginger

Wear, rub on the hands or anoint green candles to bring you money. Also anoint money before sending to ensure its return.

Fire Oil (Elemental)

Fortuna Oil:

To a glass bottle add the following:

One part frankincense absolute oil,

One part lemon essential oil,

Two parts lavender,

One eighth part citronella essential oil,

A few whole aniseeds or saffron threads to the bottle,

Eight parts light mineral oil as a base.

Fortuna Oil is especially good for anointing lucky charms, and yellow and orange lucky candles.

It is also said to dispose the energies of luck in your favor when rubbed on the palms of the hands before playing games of chance. A typical Puerto Rican practice is to buy a lottery ticket and place it beneath a candlestick holding a drip-less yellow candle anointed with this oil. The candles should be held in the hand and anointed from the middle of the shaft to the top and then from the middle to the base, as this symbolically addresses the wish for luck to heaven and then to the energies manifestation on earth.
